CUNNINGHAM CASE BEGINS NEW PHASE

Jury's Told Political Leader Sought State Account for a Bank He Represented

By MARCIA CHAMBERS
A special grand jury is looking into whether Patrick J. Cunningham used his political influence as the Democratic state chairman to obtain the transfer of certain interest-free state accounts to favored banks.

This latest turn in the investigation by Maurice H. Nadjar, the special state anticorruption prosecutor, into Mr. Cunningham's political and financial affairs was disclosed yesterday by a spokesman for James P. Melton, the state's Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. Mr. Melton testified before a special state grand jury in the Bronx for more than two hours Wednesday.

The spokesman, Edward O'Neill, said Mr. Melton testified that in 1975 Mr. Cunningham, who is also his party's leader in the Bronx, asked him to recommend transferring one of the department's interest-free accounts from a branch of the Chase Manhattan Bank to a Bronx branch of the American National Bank.

Quick Repeat Asked On New Estate Tax

By MICHAEL STONE
The new Council of Economic Advisors, whose chairman is Governor Carey and whose co-chairman is Mayor Beame, decided yesterday to seek immediate repeal of the city's state tax and an easing of the stock-transfer tax burden on brokers and dealers as the first steps in a program to dramatically improve the business climate of the state and the city.

The week-old council, which was formed by the Governor to unify the work of more than a dozen bodies seeking to improve the city's economy, also agreed to ask the Legislature to reduce the income tax on the highest incomes and to remove some of the taxes hurting small businesses. Final drafts of the legislative proposals will be submitted to the Legislature by the end of the month.

Control Board Turns Down Transit Contract on Raise

By FRANCIS X. CLINES
The state's Emergency Financial Control Board rejected the transit workers' contract yesterday and instructed New York City's Transit Authority to negotiate and submit a revised wage pact by May 15, taking into account the ban on cost-of-living increases.

Emphasizing that the new agreement must not adversely affect the city or state budgets, Governor Carey, chairman of the Control Board, said he considered it possible to attain an agreement on a salary increase. The Control Board's staff director, Stephen Berger, commented to worker productivity that in the initial pact.

Matthew Guinan, international president of the Transport Workers Union, said the call for a new contract was "pointless" unless the Control Board, not the Transit Authority, was at the bargaining table.

"It is with them that we must meet if agreement is to be reached on a binding contract," said Mr. Guinan, stressing the view that the Transit Authority, by supervising the city's fiscal life, is now the real power with which to deal.

At a news conference at his office on the Avenue of the Americas at West 55th Street, following the board meeting, Mr. Carey emphasized that the Transit Authority would do the negotiating. However, he seemed to yield at least slightly on this point, designating the Control Board's staff director, Stephen Berger, to communicate with the union and Transit Authority and offer them "guidelines."

U.S. COURT DIRECTS BUFFALO END BIAS

Says School Segregation Is Perpetuated Intentionally
—Also Blames State

Special to The New York Times
BUFFALO, April 30—A Federal District Court judge ruled today that the city government and state education officials had intentionally perpetuated racial segregation in Buffalo's public schools, and he ordered them to meet with him on May 19 to begin preparing an integration plan.

During lengthy litigation, it was generally conceded that it could take a year or more to adopt such a plan.

The Federal Judge, John T. Curtin, said in a 150-page decision that the segregation he found in the public schools violated the 14th Amendment right to equal protection under the laws.

Judge Curtin said that the parties must now turn their attention to a remedy that would end the unconstitutional segregation.

United Airlines Will Pay $1 Million in Bias Dispute

Settlement of Lawsuit Provides for Changes in Hiring and in Seniority
System to Protect Minorities

By ERNEST HOLSENDOERF
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 30—United lost $42.9 million. United Airlines agreed today to pay more than $1 million in back pay to settle discrimination complaints brought by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission on behalf of members of minority groups and women.

United, the nation's largest air passenger carrier, signed a consent decree in Chicago to settle a lawsuit originally filed three years ago by the Department. The commission later took over the suit.

Under the decree, United will pay $1,050,000 to an unspecified number of minority group members and women allegedly denied jobs illegally and awarded retroactive seniority to black pilots and mechanics rejected earlier for employment.

United, suffering through the recession with other airlines, lost $7.75 million last year on revenues of $2.2 billion. In the first quarter of this year, normally the weakest for airlines,

In addition to the money awarded, the decree provides for changes in hiring procedure, specific goals and timetables for improving minority employment and changes in the seniority system to protect members of minority groups and women from the probability of being laid off in times of recession.

Lowell W. Perry, chairman of the commission, released a statement this afternoon observing that "the settlement while establishing far-reaching programs benefiting minorities and women at the management level, is also the largest Government case to date, with respect to respondent size, that has gone to trial under Title 7."

Earlier consent decrees involving discrimination allegations against the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and several steel companies resulted in much larger settlements.

ITALIAN CABINET RESIGNS, OPENING WAY FOR ELECTION

Voting, Expected In June, Is Regarded as the Most Significant Since '48

COMMUNIST GAINS SEEN

Party Could Become Nation's Largest and Demand a Share of Power

Special to The New York Times

ROME, April 30—The Italian Government resigned tonight, opening the way for general elections this June that could bring the Communist Party a share of power.

The decision by the Cabinet led by Prime Minister Aldo Moro set the stage for a showdown at the polls between the Christian Democrats and the Communists, Italy's second largest party. The election will be the most significant since 1948, when the Christian Democrats emerged victorious to begin their dominance of Italian politics.

The Communist Party, which fell only two percentage points behind the Christian Democrats in local and regional elections a year ago, is hoping to emerge from the general election as Italy's largest political force. It would then be in a strengthened position to demand seats in the cabinet, a prospect that dismayed Washington and other capitals of the North Atlantic Alliance.

Support Vanishes
Mr. Moro, who saw support for his Cabinet vanish after two days of debate in the Chamber of Deputies, called a 15-minute Cabinet meeting tonight. He then went to the Quirinal Palace to hand his resignation to President Giovanni Leone, who is now expected to dissolve Parliament and announce the date for elections.

"I believe I have done my duty to the end," said the 59-year-old Mr. Moro in announcing his resignation.

A statement from the palace tonight said that the President had asked Mr. Moro to remain as the leader of a caretaker cabinet and that Mr. Leone would begin talks with leading politicians tomorrow. It did not mention when he would dissolve Parliament.

Socialists Withdraw Backing
The election could not come at a worse time for the Christian Democrats. The lira is sinking, political violence is rising and the party finds itself severely damaged by charges that some of its leading figures were involved in payoffs from the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation.

Still, the party had no choice. The crisis began in a dispute over an abortion-reform bill, and the Socialist Party, which has been crucial in keeping the Christian Democrats afloat, withdrew its tacit support.

Many previous crises here—there have been 38 cabinets since the fall of Fascism in 1943—were resolved by a reshuffling of faces and coalitions.

Portuguese Act to Grant Some Autonomy to Islands

By MARVINE HOWE
Special to The New York Times

LISBON, April 30—Portugal moved today to grant a measure of autonomy to its Atlantic islands of the Azores and Madeira as a counter to separatist campaigns there.

Both the Government and the military Council of the Revolution approved provisional statutes to establish the Autonomous Regions of the Azores and Madeira, with Portuguese sovereignty to be exercised in each by a minister appointed in Lisbon.

Final statutes are to be drafted by the new regional assemblies to be elected by the end of June and must be approved by the Portuguese Parliament. But today's legislation sets the guidelines.

Each island group is to have a local government appointed by the minister. He in turn is to be named by Portugal's President on the recommendation of his Prime Minister.

Economic Concern
The new statutes reaffirm Portuguese sovereignty over the islands but give them a much greater degree of self-government. What the statutes do not provide for—and what many islander want—is economic autonomy.

There have been insistent demands by the autonomists for local banks and free ports in the islands but Lisbon has rejected these demands on the ground that they would provide a dangerous outlet for currency.

What the islanders fear is that they will have to pay for the economic crisis in mainland Portugal, through higher taxes and their foreign-currency revenue. At present all their foreign income goes to Lisbon, but the regional assemblies are expected to press for a change.

Today's decisions are not expected to end the separatist movements.

SABOTEUR BLAMED FOR PEKING BLAST

China Says Attack on Soviet Embassy Was the Act of 'Counterrevolutionary'

By Reuters

PEKING, April 30—China tonight blamed a "counterrevolutionary" saboteur for an explosion outside the Soviet Embassy here that the Soviet Union said killed two Chinese soldiers.

The statement, a virtual admission that a Chinese was responsible, added to speculation of continuing political unrest in the wake of leadership changes and political violence in the capital.

"Counterrevolutionaries" is Peking's jargon for serious lawbreakers and is normally used only of Chinese.

Two Western diplomats, meanwhile, said they were informed by Soviet envoys that yesterday afternoon's blast was caused by a bomb and occurred when a group of Chinese were stopped by guards as they tried to enter the embassy compound.

According to this account, two sentries died and another Chinese was injured or killed near the gates of the imposing, stone-walled embassy in Antaiyuan.

In Rome, Minor Scandals and Major Ills

By ALVIN SHUSTER
Special to The New York Times

ROME, April 30—The Italians are doing well this week in the International Horse Show, the azaleas are ablaze on the Spanish Steps, the long-distance telephone operator is answering the phone in Rome and the sun is out in this coldest spring in 70 years. All that, however, has hardly generated any national euphoria.

The Italians, weary of all the talk of political and monetary crises, are about to get another heavy dose of rhetoric, with the resignation of the Government tonight and the start of an election campaign. For many of the country's bureaucrats, however, that campaign started the other day with new relations in what has become known as the Great Car Scandal.

It seems that too many of those lucky Government workers who are entitled to automobiles and drivers have been abusing the privilege. They have been accused of using the cars for just about everything short of picking up envelopes from Lockheed. Photographers are selling pictures—at outrageous prices to the newspapers, which have been leading the pack with disclosures of how cars are being used when they are not on official business. There was the photo of the laundry caper—a bureaucrat's wife handing the clean linen to a subservient driver.

There was the school episode—a little girl picked up to be driven the few blocks to her home. And there was the Brindisi chapter, in which an official car was sent all the way to that southern port to fetch a relative of some Government official.

The result is that the bureaucrats, who are rarely identified have been removing little shields identifying the cars as "official." Some officials are now sitting in showrooms, beside the drivers, and waiting for the next scandal. Continued on Page 2, Column 3 suggesting that a couple of friends are merely out for a pleasant drive. Newspapers, traditionally read in the back seat, now lie discreetly on the bureaucrats' lap, up iron.

"There goes one," shouted a young Roman the other day. "Look he's sitting up front trying to hide!"

One estimate is that 40 percent of the hundreds of official cars are used for unofficial trips. The Attorney General of Rome said he would investigate all the charges, including a report that two officials who live in the same building are picked up daily by two different cars and taken to the same office.

No Room for the Horse?

If bureaucrat-spotting is in fashion, the horses and carriages, the favorites of tourists, are not, any longer. Forty years ago there were 4,000 of them, last year there were 100, and now there are fewer than 50.

It's all rather depressing for the carriage drivers, who complain about the lack of stables and blacksmiths, the high cost of oats and the indifference of Roman authorities who refuse to allow the carriages down the narrow lanes reserved for taxis and buses.

Early this afternoon, near the Piazza Venezia, four of the drivers leaned against their carriages as their horses chewed oats from burlap bags. Dino Bruschi, 35 years old, was particularly unhappy about the trends.

"I think they want to ease us out of the business now and take away our licenses because they think we are clogging up the streets," he said bitterly. "They want to put more taxis on the streets. Yet the horses and carriage has been a tradition in Rome and we want to keep it up."

"My father was a driver and when he died, I took his place," said another driver, Sergio Santini, 43. "We are proud of what we do and we want to keep doing it. But it is getting more and more difficult. Blacksmiths are hard to find. Feed has gone up. And people think our fares are too high."

Towering behind them in the piazza was the Victor Emmanuel Monument, another topic of worry these days. It appears that the huge marble monument, put up in 1911, is showing signs of strain, and so it is now closed to the public.

The marble, brought to Rome from the Brescia area in northern Italy, is beginning to break up, largely because of exposure to weather and some defective work in the original construction. The foundation is also shifting, under what is not everyone's favorite monument; it is sometimes called the wedding cake, or the typewriter.

Two soldiers still flank the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at the monument's base, 24 hours a day. But the public is kept away and the Superintendent of Monuments of Rome is not quite sure when it will open again to the public. "Every attempt to repair the damage has so far been useless," he said.

Attempts to make phone calls to points inside or outside Italy also seem useless most of the time, although, for some strange reason, long-distance operators were answering today. A recent test of the system showed, however, that efforts to reach the public-service agencies of Italy often fail.

One newspaper reported the other day that if an Italian wants to dictate a telegram, find out about the weather, reach the electricity company or the rail station, he might be wise to arm himself with patience. The gas company came off with high marks, particularly if there was a suggestion of an imminent explosion.

All is not disaster and decay. The restaurants still operate well. A bus ride still costs the equivalent of only 6 cents. The Italians generally seem to be taking it all in stride, though they are apprehensive about the forthcoming elections. And there are always those bright

Profiles of Italy's Parties

Seven major parties are represented in the Italian Parliament. They are listed here in order of their power in the Parliament, which consists of 630 seats in the Chamber of Deputies and 315 in the Senate.

CHRISTIAN DEMOCRATIC PARTY—Won 38.7 percent of the vote in general elections in 1972 and 35.3 percent in regional elections in 15 of the nation's 20 regions in June 1975. The party leader, Benigno Zaccagnini, was reconfirmed in a party congress in March. In a move that seems to indicate that the Christian Democrats are preparing for a confirmation with the Communists, Amintore Fanfani, ousted last year as the Christian Democratic leader, was elected earlier this month as president of the party's national council, a largely ceremonial job. The party was founded in 1943 by former members of the pre-Fascist era Popular Party. Traditionally centrist, Roman Catholic and divided among themselves, the Christian Democrats have dominated Italian politics for 30 years.

COMMUNIST PARTY—Won 27.1 percent in general elections in 1972 and 33.4 percent in regional elections in 1975. The party leader is Enrico Berlinguer. The party, founded in 1921 in a split from the Socialist Party, played an active part in drawing up the Constitution of the Italian Republic after World War II and in the first postwar governments until it was expelled from government, with the Socialists, by the Christian Democrats in 1948.

SOCIALIST PARTY—Won 9.6 percent in general elections in 1972 and 12 percent in regional elections in 1975. Francesco de Martino was confirmed as its leader at the party's national congress in February. It is Italy's oldest party, founded in 1892, and for years it was Italy's only working-class party. It has been weakened by a series of splits, the most severe in 1921, when the Communists seceded. In 1963, the Socialist Party entered a coalition with the Christian Democrats that has endured for most of the last 13 years.

ITALIAN SOCIAL MOVEMENT—NATIONAL RIGHT WING—Won 8.7 percent in general elections in 1972 and 6.4 percent in regional elections in 1975. The party leader is Giorgio Almirante. The organization, founded in 1946 by former leaders of Mussolini's Fascist Government, is commonly referred to here as the Neo-Fascist Party, though it professes to support the democratic process.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY—Won 5.1 percent in general elections in 1972 and 5.6 percent in regional voting in 1975. The party leader, Giuseppe Saragat, 77 years old, was elected to replace Mario Tanassi at the party congress in March, apparently in reaction to the Lockheed scandal, in which Mr. Tanassi is said to have been involved. The party was founded in 1947 in a split from the Socialist Party of Proletarian Unity.

LIBERAL PARTY—Won 3.9 percent in general elections in 1972 and 2.5 percent in the 1975 regional elections. The party leader, Valerio Zanone, 40, was elected last February, replacing Giovanni Malagodi. The party was founded in Bologna in 1922. After the fall of Fascism, it formed part of the National Liberation Front and at one point its leader was the writer Benedetto Croce. The party was represented in important ministerial posts in the centrist governments of the 1950's.

REPUBLICAN PARTY—Won 2.9 percent in the general elections in 1972 and 3.2 percent in the regional elections in 1975. The leader is Oddo Blasini. The party was created from the Republican Movement in 1935. It is a staunchly pro-West and traditionally anticlerical group that advocates free enterprise and American-style democracy. The Republicans were partners with the Christian Democrats in Italy's 37th post-Fascist Government from November 1974 to January of this year.

Government Resigns in Italy, Opening the Way for Elections

tions that always left the Christian Democrats dominant. But this one was different in that the party tried and failed to find a way out.

The Socialists, who argued without success for an emergency government to deal with Italy's growing troubles, made it clear that elections were the only possibility. So they abandoned their pledge to abstain in crucial votes in Parliament and the 79-day-old Government collapsed.

Elections had not been scheduled until next year, and the Christian Democrats, as well as the Communists, had tried to wait until then. The Communist Party wanted to wait until after the United States Presidential elections, aware that a victory for them in June would project the "Italian question" into the American campaign.

The Socialists, whose objectives are not always clear, apparently feel that they stand to increase their share of the vote because many Italians are disillusioned with the Christian Democrats, afraid of the Communists and looking for a third party to support. In the regional and local voting last year the Christian Democrats won 35 percent, the Communists 33 and the Socialists 12. The possibility of elections here has helped generate the economic and monetary crisis because of worry over the outcome and the failure of the Christian Democrats to govern effectively. Since mid-January the lira has fallen more than 30 percent against the dollar, prices have risen and crucial economic decisions have been delayed.

All such crises work to the benefit of the Communists, who are craving for a share of cabinet power in a so-called "historical compromise" with Christian Democrats and other non-Communist parties. The Communists realize that they will be unable to emerge with a majority of the seats in the 630-seat Chamber, but they believe that their chances for cabinet seats will be greatly enhanced. Italians are worried by signs that the campaign could be one of Italy's most violent.

A leading member of the neo-Fascist party was shot to death yesterday in Milan. A 21-year-old man died today from stab wounds inflicted by rightist extremists. Rightist and leftist groups clashed today with the police in Rome, Bologna and Palermo.

Moreover, there has been a recent series of arson attacks against warehouses, factories and police stations. A local Communist office was damaged today by a firebomb.

C.I.A. Weather Study Cites Global Crises

WASHINGTON, April 30 (AP)—A report from the Central Intelligence Agency warns of global political and economic upheaval almost "beyond comprehension" because of climatic changes that have already occurred.

The report says the world has entered a period of adverse weather that will reduce crop production and cause widespread famine and starvation. The unfavorable weather is likely to last for at least 40 years and possibly centuries, the report added.

Based on a study by Dr. Reid A. Bryson of the University of Wisconsin, the report states that long-term changes in the weather may cause a major drought in India every four years resulting in the starvation of 150 million people, a major famine in China every five years and the loss of the Soviet wheat fields in Kazakhstan.

The report will not be made public until Monday, but a copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

The world reserve would have to supply 30 to 50 million metric tons of grain each year to prevent the death of 150 million Indians, the report said. China, with a major famine every five years would require a supply of 50 million metric tons of grain, and the Soviet Union would lose Kazakhstan for grain production, thereby showing a yearly loss of 48 million metric tons of grain, it added.

Canada, a major exporter, would lose over 50 percent of its production capability and 75 percent of its exporting capabilities, and Northern Europe will lose 25 to 30 percent of its present production capability, while the Common Market countries would "zero exports," the report said. As examples of the impact in climate which is taking the report cited record rains and cold spells last three years from the United States.

Another C.I.A. report public last year, has increasingly desperate on the part of the hungry nations, to any way they could, by force, would be political and economic stability would be wide

Soviet's New Minister of Defense

Dmitri Fyodorovich Ustinov

By CHRISTOPHER S. WREN

MOSCOW, April 30—When the Soviet astronaut in Soyuz and the Americans in Apollo linked their craft in space last July, a husky, square-jawed man wearing metal-rimmed spectacles intently followed the docking feat from the Soyuz mission control center in a Moscow suburb. Dmitri Fyodorovich Ustinov was more than just another ranking official. The mission, he told under his broad responsibilities as the Kremlin's chief of the defense industry, which encompasses the space program. Typically, the congratulations beamed into space came from the Soviet party chief, Leonid I. Brezhnev, and not from Mr. Ustinov, who has long professed the low profile of a technocrat.

An efficient and durable technocrat.

Under a Government reorganization in 1968, Mr. Ustinov became Minister of Armaments and Munitions. He was also named Deputy Prime Minister's first deputy with duties that included in part the proud new Soviet space program. After the first manned flight by Yuri Gagarin in 1961, Mr. Ustinov was again designated a Hero of Socialist Labor for his outstanding services in the development of rocketry and insuring the successful flight.

In 1963, Mr. Ustinov was promoted to a First Deputy Prime Minister, a post he shared with another Lenin-trained technocrat, Aleksei N. Kosygin, who later became Prime Minister. But Mr. Ustinov found himself an uncomfortable stepchild of Mr. Kosygin's, then the Soviet leader.

By background, a proponent of heavy industry, Mr. Ustinov was saddled with the supervision of new regional economic councils called sovkhoszes, which Mr. Kosygin had created to decentralize the Soviet economy. In a 1963 speech berating the "steel eaters" of heavy industry, Mr. Kosygin boasted how he had successfully "prodded Comrade Ustinov."

Yesterday, Mr. Ustinov made news by being named Minister of Defense.

Mr. Ustinov, who is 67 years old, began supervising tank production as Stalin's bright young Communist of Armaments in World War II. Except for a stint in the Soviet economy, he worked under Nikita S. Khrushchev, he has been deeply involved in the defense sector ever since.

In an apparent gesture to make him more acceptable to the professional military, Mr. Ustinov was appointed a four-star general of the army, a rank shared by Mr. Brezhnev. Previously, Mr. Ustinov had carried the titular rank of a three-star of colonel general in the engineer corps.

Western military attaches credit Mr. Ustinov with a formidable grasp of defense production, but wonder whether his lack of troop command experience could limit his performance. "No doubt he can make tanks but can he lead them?" one military specialist remarked.

Though he may rely upon his military subordinates more than did his predecessor Marshal Andrei A. Grechko, who died on Monday, Mr. Ustinov is still a tough and experienced executive. His confident bearing has impressed diplomats who have met him at occasional receptions.

Consequently, his contribution is likely to be more in the tradition of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara in the Kennedy Administration as an administrator who can push ahead with modernization of the Soviet Union's four-million-member armed forces.

The promotion is the second for Mr. Ustinov in less than two months, underscoring his rising political fortunes. When the Soviet party congress ended in March he was made a full member of the ruling Politburo after more than a decade as a candidate member.

Mr. Ustinov made his mark early. Born to working-class parents in Samara on the Volga River, near Kuybyshev, he first held jobs as a fitter in a paper plant and as a diesel mechanic.

He went on to the military, mechanical institute in Leningrad, graduating as a mechanical engineer. His subsequent rise was fast. Mr. Ustinov went to a Leningrad factory in 1937 as a design engineer and by the following year was the factory's director.

When the Germans and their allies invaded the Soviet Union in 1941, Mr. Ustinov, only 33 years old, was chosen by Stalin to become the People's Commissar of Armaments, a post he held through the war. The speed with which he mobilized industry to an all-out war effort earned him the title of Hero of Socialist Labor in 1942. He went on to receive several other awards normally reserved for combat commanders.

BREZHNEV HONORS WORKERS: Leonid I. Brezhnev, Communist leader, attacks the Order of the October Revolution in the flag of Likhachov Auto Works on visit to plant. He gave there his first public speech since 25th Communist Party Congress last winter.

Dutch Bid Juliana, 67, Happy Birthday

Special to The New York Times
SOESTDIJK, the Netherlands, April 30—Queen Juliana of the Netherlands celebrated her 67th birthday today with thousands of her subjects at a carnival-like party on the lawn of the royal palace here.

The enthusiastic crowd, in orange hats and ribbons to symbolize the House of Orange, was larger than those of past years. It was an apparent show of support for the popular Queen, whose husband, Prince Bernhard, is under investigation by a Dutch panel on charges that he accepted payments from the Lockheed Corporation for help in promoting plane sales here.

In the three months since a Senate hearing in Washington first received testimony that Lockheed had made payments in the Netherlands, no proof has been produced that the Prince was the recipient, and most of the Dutch still appear to believe the Prince's denial of any wrongdoing.

A Mood of Apprehension

But the Senate hearing produced feelings of shock here, and the continuing investigation is being followed by many here with apprehension.

The three man commission set up by the Dutch Government to conduct the investigation spent this week in Washington seeking fuller explanations from principals in the case. It is expected to file its report in June.

The frequent press reports about the Lockheed affair appear to have contributed to a general feeling of compassion and support for the Queen. Today thousands of ordinary citizens paraded past the palace to salute Juliana, who waved from the front steps, surrounded by the royal family.

Many paraders stepped out of line to hand her gifts such as cheeses, books and dolls. A flock of blonde-headed royal grandchildren bounded up and down the steps, collecting bouquets of flowers that many mothers brought. Afterward the Queen, Bernhard at her side, toured the grounds on which royalist clubs from 30 towns had set up displays of folk dancing, gymnastics, homemaking crafts and children's games.

The atmosphere was free and easy, a trademark of the House of Orange, which seldom lets protocol get in the way of contact with the people. At one point Bernhard himself took over the wheel of a large green convertible and drove the Queen out to the road beyond the palace gate to wave at crowds that could not get inside.

"We wanted to demonstrate that we trust and believe in the Queen and also Prince Bernhard said Gaspar Graafstal, head chaplain of the Dutch Army who is president of the League of Royalist Clubs.

"We could have had half a million people here because of the high feasts for the Queen, but we told people to celebrate in their home towns," he said.

That request was meant to keep the support for the Queen from taking on a political aspect. So far, most Dutch conservatives and Socialists have refrained from using the Lockheed affair for political purposes.

There have been some leftist attacks on Bernhard for his business connections and some charges from the right that the Government wants to force an abdication to put the Queen's daughter, Princess Beatrix, on the throne.

Most politicians have remained silent in the affair, awaiting the report of the commission.

Albanian Reports Plot in Party To Turn From China to Soviet

VIENNA, April 30 (AP)—The Albanian Communist party has uncovered a faction that conspired to promote a policy to break ties with China and to lead Albania back into the Soviet bloc, the party chief, Enver Hoxha, said today.

He did not say who was involved in the "plot" or when it occurred.

In a speech reported by the Albanian press agency, Mr. Hoxha said that while other Communist countries were spreading reports about a worsening of Albanian-Chinese relations, "the internal enemies and traitors, too, are working against the friendship between our two countries."

"The enemies and revisionists, like those who opposed the party line, who wanted to sabotage the building of Socialism and disintegrate the foundations of our Socialist homeland, have been discovered by our party, which exposed them and swept them away."

"They even wanted to deteriorate our friendship with our sister China, with Mao Tse-tung's Communist Party, and to link our country with the Soviet revisionists," Mr. Hoxha added.

The party leader spoke to Albanian and Chinese workers at a metallurgical complex under construction.

Mr. Hoxha, whose policies are strongly pro-Chinese and anti-Soviet, also announced that the Albanian leadership had ousted two Cabinet ministers for "grave errors committed in the party line and in his discharge of their functions."

Albania, a narrow mountainous land, has a population of about 2.5 million and extends 225 miles along the east coast of the Adriatic. It is bordered by Yugoslavia and Greece.

Albania and Communist guerrillas took over in 1944. The Soviet Union broke ties with Albania in December 1961 and in 1962 barred it from meetings of the Warsaw Pact alliance. Albania withdrew from the pact in 1968.

In 1970 China and Albania signed a new treaty providing for expanded trade and additional Chinese credits.

Yugoslav Paper Closes Bureau In Prague Amid New Tensions

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, April 30—The Belgrade news paper Politika announced today that it would close its office in Czechoslovakia, a measure that appeared to reflect growing Yugoslav irritation with Moscow's campaign to tighten its hold over all European Communist parties.

Czechoslovakia is seen here, particularly since the Czechoslovak Communist Party congress earlier this month, as the Soviet Union's main proxy in advocating Kremlin hegemony over Communists everywhere.

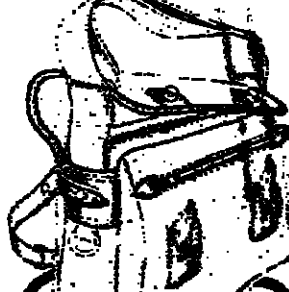

All newspapers in Yugoslavia are directed by the League of Communists, as the Communist Party is called, and the closure of the Prague office of the influential political daily resulted from a high-level political decision.

A brief announcement by Politika said only that its Prague correspondent, Bozidar Jovanovic, was closing the bureau because of "obstacles" allegedly placed in the way of "professional obligations."

Yugoslav officials say privately they were deeply disturbed by speeches at the Czechoslovak Party congress denouncing deviation by other Communist bloc absolute leaders. The Czechoslovak Party secretary, Gustav Husak, also strongly reiterated the "right and obligation" of the Soviet Union to dictate the line of leadership foreign Communist parties must have.

It was a principal theme of a nationally held press conference for law reporters by Stanislav Gostin, secretary general of the Yugoslav Communist Party. He used particularly strong language in insisting that there CHATEAU VIGNELAURE, as far as we know, is the only vineyard that uses no herbicides, no pesticides. It relies solely on the birds in its sanctuary to destroy harmful insects. Specially-blended fertilizer is the one outside element brought into the chateau. This red wine vineyard is located a few miles from Aix-en-Provence and, as in the Medoc, uses primarily the Cabernet grape in its production. The rich, full-bodied 1973 CHATEAU VIGNELAURE will surely delight you. The unusual combination of ancient agricultural techniques (only the most up-to-date methods are used) makes this wine outstanding. It is featured at the 600 Moulon de Mougins above Cannes. Limited quantity. Available at only $2.99 the bottle, $45.50 the case.

THE RITES OF SPRING

THE RHINE RIVER IS AGLOW with Spring wine festivals. Most of the young glasses are filled with good wine—a happy harmony of May white wine flavored with the fragrant Waldmeister herb. America's most sophisticated wine drinkers know that it is served only on the most exalted occasions at the White House.

SCHRAMM'S BLANC DE BLANCS BRUT 1973 is hard to come by. It is produced in California where it is produced. It is the only champagne in the world that is produced in California. # Jungle Covers All but the Memories at Refugee City on Guam

By ANDREW H. MALCOLM
Special to The New York Times

OROTE POINT, Guam—The big silver jet plane screamed in low off the bright Philippine Sea, its giant rubber wheels screeching as they hit the hot tarmac.

An hour later another craft arrived. One after another they came. They unloaded, they fueled, and then they roared out again off the cliff, climbing up toward the west.

So began Operation Frequent Wind on April 23 one year ago at 4:01 P.M. when the first of hundreds of planes from South Vietnam landed on Guam in what was to become one of the largest movements of refugees in modern history.

In a matter of days 111,919 Indochinese refugees would move through this 30-mile-long island, virtually doubling its population and focusing worldwide attention here.

The refugees have left now, and the jungle has covered some, but not all, of the scars.

One year ago here there were priests, peddlers and prostitutes, soldiers, sailors and airmen, mothers, fathers and children, always many children. They were the quietest of the displaced. Many of the little ones were lost and silently searched for friends in a world of unfamiliar adult knees.

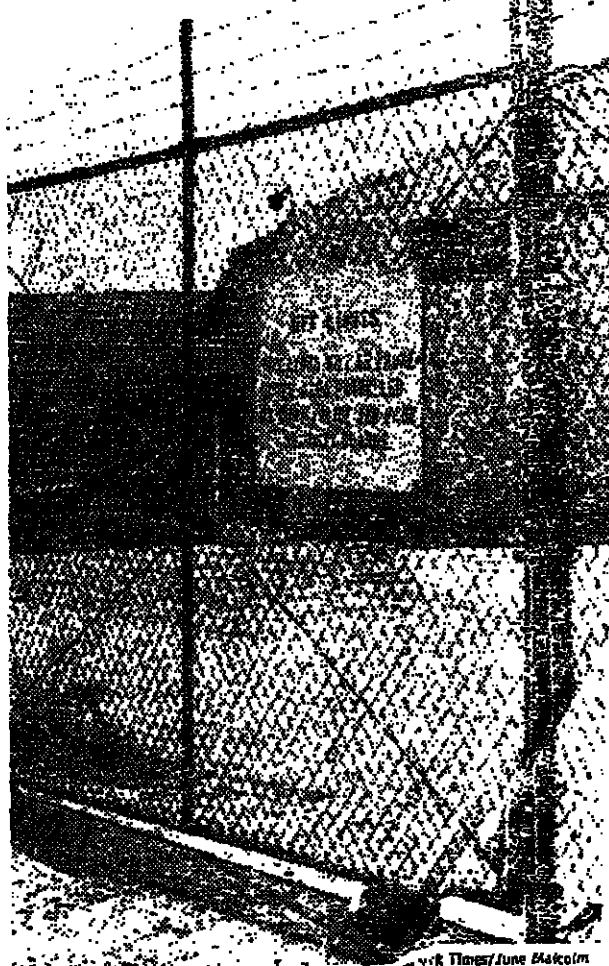

Some grown-ups lost too. Some having been separated from family in the chaos that reigned in South Vietnam during the war's waning hours.

Tran Nhat Duong, whose wife, son and daughter were carried away from his outstretched hands by a surging crowd at Saigon's airport, walked up to a total stranger on a Guam pier last year.

"I keep saying," he said, "maybe I see my wife here. I think I will. What do you think? Is there a chance maybe?"

Mr. Duong has lost to perhaps who was carried by South Vietnam. He likely ship last Oct. 1975 camp he went to United States. "Another life in States," he always what "new land."

He said they had fled of political reprisals. Religious persecution by new Communist author-ties. Others were simply swept along in the tides of panic that emptied entire neighborhoods in minutes. Some fled on jets of that merchant of most all ships at sea. In Guam, of them came in this vast speck of tropical Pacific.

American territory to be their home for weeks. The last refugee flight left Guam the mainland on Aug. 26.

While on the island the refugees lived in 10 camps including the largest one here at Orote Point.

Almost overnight, American military men turned an abandoned, overgrown Japanese fighter airfield into a teeming tent city complete with soft-drink machines, a zip code and a solitary stop sign that everyone ignored.

This city's population then was 39,331. For over a mile, 3,968 large tents, part of the 2,000 tons supplies airlifted here in seven days from places as distant as Tahiti, stretched out across the red coral ground that forced the sailors to drive the tent stakes with jackhammers.

The canvas tents were covered with messages in Vietnamese left for friends and family. "Nguyen vich giao," one said, "we have gone to the camp in Florida. Vu Duc Long."

2 Hospitals and 5 Movies
This tent city then had hot dog vendors, daily church services, beggars and thieves. It had two hospitals, eight dining halls, five movies, 300 showers and a bank open seven days a week, down to dark, buying gold from homeless refugees. The city had miles of dusty streets patrolled by Americans wearing, of course, white hats.

And there was Bob Brown handing out disposable diapers. "I have three kinds for you," said the combat infantry lieutenant, "newborn, overnight or toddler."

Effect of Insecticides
The insecticide sprayed to control mosquito-borne diseases last spring apparently upset some natural balance. Other insects now seem in temporary overabundance, their natural enemies also apparently spray victims.

About a thousand refugees chose to settle in Guam, including an energetic group of Vietnamese fishermen who with the help of the Rev. Thomas Sebbins have found a fishing company providing Guam families with fresh seafood daily. Operating at first from a bamboo raft and later from small motorboats donated by Robert Jones, a Guam businessman, fishermen like Nguyen Hau Tri and Tran Huong return daily with over 100 pounds of fish. During one good week a three-man crew split $930 from their catches.

Threat to Enterprise Seen
The initial success represented by the fishing company and a Vietnamese handyman service, however, seem threatened by food stamp and other welfare programs, according to Mr. Sebbins. He said that some Vietnamese had decided it was better to receive a little less money without work, spend 12-hour work a shark-infested waters. There were 24 other named refugees who here but not by choice, the Naval cemetery, the wind still swishes the towering palm mounds of raw dirt he tled now in the gr these victims of disease, age and hardship.

The temporary white crosses, erected after funerals last spring, are in their place now a gray stone markers shiny surfaces are covered by tentacles of crabgrass.

Under this growth scripton reads: "Bat Thach, Born May 1, Died May 1, 1975."

100,000 Throng Saigon Pal On Anniversary of War's

SAIGON, South Vietnam, Nguyen Giap of North April 30 (Agence France-Presse)—One hundred thousand people paraded in the main courtyard of the former presidential palace in Saigon today on the first anniversary of the end of the Vietnam war.

Addressing the crowd from a balcony of the palace, Pham Hung, a member of the Politburo, said Vietnam was entering a new era with the promise of "a striking development of our peaceful, independent and socialist country."

Mr. Hung, the Communist Party's secretary general, was flanked by such South Vietnamese leaders as Nguyen Huu Tho, president of the National Liberation Front, Huynh Tan Phat, president of the Provisional Revolutionary Government, Nguyen Thi Binh, Foreign Minister, and Nguyen Thi Dinh, president of the Freed Women Movement.

Hundreds of young men and women took part in a display of dancing to revolutionary songs after Mr. Hung's speech. The crowds then paraded past the officials, in a carnival atmosphere. Portraits of Ho Chi Minh bobbed over the marchers' heads.

The parade ended to the scream of jet engines as North Vietnamese MIG fighters flew over the palace.

Peking Links Embassy Blast to Saboteur

revisionist Street.
A statement from a Foreign Ministry spokesman simply said that the incident was "sabotage by a counter-revolutionary" and that investigations were continuing.
It was the second time this month that "counter-revolutionaries" were accused of political violence in Peking.
On April 5, victors set fire to cars and a building in Tien An Men square, the worst violence here since the Cultural Revolution of the 1960's.
According to the Soviet version given to Western diplomats, the explosion was a powerful blast that slightly damaged buildings inside the huge compound.
Although several hundred Soviet citizens work and live in the compound, none was reported hurt. The explosion was technically on Chinese soil just outside the gates.
Journalists were allowed to inspect and photograph a guard post, whose door was ripped off its hinges and whose windows were smashed.
At a reception tonight, the Soviet Ambassador, Vasily S. Tolstikov, told diplomats that he saw two killed and one wounded in the incident but added few other details.
One Western envoy said Soviet sources appeared to regard the blast as the work of extremists and appeared surprised and worried.
Another reported that he had been personally shown damage alleged to have been caused by shrapnel, including broken windows in an embassy reception room, and metal fragments.
The explosion was the latest turn in the long Chinese-Soviet cold war. Relations between the two Communist nations have been bad for more than a decade with no sign of a solution to bitter ideological and state disputes.
Not Reported in China
China's new Prime Minister, Hua Kuo-feng made no mention of the incident when he delivered a typically tough anti-Soviet speech last night. By tonight, the blast had not been reported by the state-controlled news services.
Extra troops and plainclothes security men guarded the Soviet Embassy tonight.
Instead of the usual pair of People's Liberation Army soldiers that guard all embassies here, half a dozen green-uniformed troops stood outside the gates. Others with fixed bayonets patrolled the narrow lanes behind the compound.
About a score of plainclothesmen were discernible in Antirevisionist Street leading to the embassy.
Windows in a gatehouse blown in by the blast had been replaced, as had a heavy wooden door that earlier was hanging from its hinges.
Not far from the imposing embassy, Chinese residents of communal courtyards were hanging out paper lanterns for tomorrow's May Day celebrations.
The festivities will be on a larger scale than for several years in an apparent show of unity and support for the new Prime Minister after four restless months.
The death of Prime Minister Chou En-lai in January led to a fiery radical-inspired campaign against former senior Deputy Prime Minister Tong Hsiao-ping, the man regarded as his most likely successor.
Linked to Chinese Youths
TOKYO, April 30 (AP)—Five or six Chinese youths caused yesterday's explosion at the Soviet Embassy in Peking when they tried to carry a bomb into the diplomatic compound and struggled with three Chinese soldiers at the gates. Asahira, a leading Japanese newspaper, reported today.
The newspaper said two of the three soldiers and most of the intruders were apparently killed by the blast. It attributed the report to officials of the Soviet Embassy in China.

U.S. Opening to Africa Finds Nigerian Doors Shut

By JOHN DARNTON Special to The New York Times LAGOS, Nigeria, April 30—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's dual policy—warning against further Cuban-Soviet incursions in southern Africa on the one hand and voicing increased support for majority rule there on the other—arouses only anger in Nigeria.

The warning is seen as the real crux of the policy, aimed at countering growing Soviet influence, and it is deeply resented as a move that bolsters the resistance of the white-ruled regimes.

The support for black majority rule is regarded as just words, if not hypocritical words, given the record of American trade relations with Rhodesia and South Africa.

At the start of his African tour, Mr. Kissinger played down his references to the Cuban forces in nearby Angola. But his earlier remarks caused a storm of protest that has not altogether subsided.

There are indications that some Nigerian officials feel that the United States policy on southern Africa is not salvageable — that the gulf between Nigerian and American interests has simply become too wide to bridge.

The bridging of this gulf is critical to America's attempt to bolster its waning influence on the continent. Black Africa is too disparate for any one nation to be its leader, but Nigeria—because of its size and wealth—is the closest contender for the title.

The fact that Nigeria has a close relationship with Ghana, a born of their common heritage, rounded by former French colonies, lends credence to the reports that Nigeria prevailed upon Ghana to cancel Mr. Kissinger's stopover there. Three weeks ago, Nigeria also ruled out a Kissinger visit.

Although the federal military Government has said it will not commit its 250,000-man army to the fight in the south except under the auspices of the Organization of African Unity, tempo for deeper involvement is clearly rising.

The major liberation group in South-West Africa, the South-West African People's Organization, is opening an office in Lagos soon.

After an initial barrage of critical editorials, the press here has given Mr. Kissinger's speech in Lusaka, Zambia, in which he presented a 10-point program to put pressure on the Rhodesian regime to negotiate a settlement, has gone largely unreported.

In contrast to Mr. Kissinger's call for negotiations, the Nigerian Government, in announcing $1.8 million in aid to Mozambique this week, said, "It is crystal clear that there is no alternative to intensified armed struggle in Zimbabwe"—the nationalist name for Rhodesia.

In making the "liberation" of southern Africa the focal point of its foreign policy, the Nigerian Government is staking out a position on an issue that it views in terms of morality and idealism. It perceives the over-throw from Mr. Kissinger, who seemed to ignore African affairs until the Angolan war, as a cold-war power grab.

"Where was the Secretary of State these past four years?" asked an editorial in The Nigerian Tribune on the day the Secretary of State arrived in Lagos.

to decrease here feeds the arguments of those who claim that American policy in Africa is dictated by economic considerations that automatically ally the United States with the white-ruled regimes.

Much of Mr. Kissinger's program—including the emphasis on peaceful transition—is like lectures on the evils of foreign interference in the internal affairs of other countries.

By strongly supporting the fact that won in Angola, U.S. is going to give X and X. Nigeria became a pre-eminent spokesman for Pan-African solidarity and is experiencing a new wave of nationalism at home.

Kissinger Suggests Path to Angola Ties

By MICHAEL T. KAUFMAN
 Special to The New York Times
 MONROVIA, Liberia, April 30

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said here tonight that the United States would be willing to normalize relations with Angola if the 15,000 Cuban troops there were withdrawn.

In his speech at a dinner given by Liberia's President, William R. Tolbert, Mr. Kissinger said the United States would have no problem about recognizing an African Marxist government as it proved by establishing ties with the Frelimo Government in Mozambique. But, he asked, "How can a government be considered African if it has stationed on its soil a large force from Cuba?"

"We wish Angola well as a unified and independent state," said the Secretary. He added, however, that before discussions could take place on diplomatic ties, "We want to know Angola's intentions with respect to the presence of foreign forces on its soil."

Reporters traveling with the Secretary were told that at a recent meeting between lower-level diplomats at the United Nations, the United States asked Angolan representatives what their country intended for the Cuban force. A reply is being awaited.

Mr. Kissinger's remarks tonight reflected a broadening of his earlier statements on this continent, which had focused on the problems of southern Africa, specifically on Rhodesia. In his speech here he also discussed in a general way trade between developed and underdeveloped countries. He spoke of the need to prevent radical fluctuations of the prices of raw materials exported by African countries. He also urged that Africa be given "an equitable voice and role in international economic institutions" and in shaping the global economy.

Major Address Due

In this he was setting the stage for the major address he is to give in Nairobi, Kenya, next week when he speaks before the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development. In Nairobi he is expected to make specific recommendations to narrow what many feel is the widening gap between developed northern countries and underdeveloped southern ones.

However, his references to Angola were the most significant here since the speech marked his first public statement of the tour in which he referred to the civil war there, a war that precipitated and certainly accelerated his current interest in Africa's problems.

Mr. Kissinger left Zaire this morning, getting here after a stopover in President Mobutu's several times. Most of their discussion was said to have been about United States military assistance. President Mobutu, who had backed one of the losing nationalist factions in the Angolan war, was the African leader most endangered by its outcome.

Zaire, once the strongest military power in black southern Africa, is encircled by Angola, Congo and Uganda, who have all been heavily armed by the Soviet Union.

Before the Kissinger party left Kinshasa, President Mobutu told visiting journalists: "In Angola you have heavy tanks, in Zaire you have nothing." He said that while he had been assured by Soviet and Cuban diplomats that their countries did not intend to intervene anywhere beyond Angola's borders, precautionary measures were needed. "I do not want to imply that we live in fear but to live in peace we must be prepared," he said.

Angola Seeks U.N. Entry
 Special to The New York Times
 UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., April 30

Angola has applied for membership in the United Nations, a spokesman here announced today. He said that no date had been set for the Security Council to consider the request.

Students Holding 17 In Mexico Demand Marxist Rector Quit

Special to The New York Times
 MEXICO CITY, April 20—A group of right-wing students today demanded the resignation of the Communist rector of the University of Puebla in exchange for the release of about 17 hostages being held in a campus building.

More than 400 riot policemen have surrounded the university, situated in downtown Puebla, 70 miles east of here. The Puebla State Governor Alfredo Toxqui has ordered them not to invade the campus for fear of provoking further violence.

The standoff began soon after noon Tuesday, when the rightist students occupied the University's Caroline Building after a gun battle with leftist youths in which one person was killed and eight wounded.

Since then, there have been only occasional outbreaks of gunfire between student groups. No further casualties have been reported.

Known as one of the most conservative cities in Mexico, Puebla has frequently been the scene of clashes between leftist and right-wing student groups. On May 1, 1973, five students died during Labor Day demonstrations. A few months earlier two university professors who were members of the Mexican Communist Party were found murdered.

A Growth of Violence

In recent weeks, there has also been a growth of violence between leftist and rightist students in other Mexican universities, including those of the states of Guerrero, Sonora and Oaxaca, as well as at the National Autonomous University in Mexico City.

Yesterday, at Sonora's University in Hermosillo, about 50 students were injured when the extreme right-wing Movement for Christian Integration successfully ousted a group of leftist university labor leaders who had occupied several departments there almost two months ago.

The Movement for Christian Integration supports the Rector, Alfonso Castellanos Idiague, whose resignation had been demanded by the leftists.

WHY PAY UP TO $100 OR MORE FOR MOLDED SHOES?

These Miracle 2-Oz. Shoe Inserts Do The Same Thing—For Just $3.99!

Amazing Arch-Ease 3-Layer Foot Shock-Absorber Custom-Molds Itself to Your Arch And Foot! Makes Foot Pain And Leg Fatigue Start To Disappear Within One Hour!

If you've ever had tired, aching feet, you know what Arch-Ease is like. You know the end of the day. And shooting pains go up and down your leg at every step. You've been eyeing those expensive molded-shoes—but don't like their weird styling... or their high price! And you don't want to go to a specialist to be fitted with costly custom arch supports. Is there an answer that makes sense for you?

Now there is! We call it ARCH-EASE. It's a revolutionary new three-layer shoe insert that molds itself to your feet... and you can put your feet on the comfort standard in one hour or less—for just $3.99 (for the pair!) AND FORGET ABOUT THE $100.00 OR MORE THAT MOLDED SHOES MAY COST!

How ARCH-EASE Works

ARCH-EASE's unique 3 layer design makes the difference. The bottom layer, next to your shoe, is a spongy foam-rubber material that acts like a shock-absorber. Every step, lets you walk on cobblestones or stand all day on concrete floors as if you were sinking into a plush carpet. But the middle layer is the most important secret of ARCH-EASE's success. It's a special synthetic material that molds itself to the exact shape of your foot—arches, bunions, corns, hammer-toes, and all—within an hour of the time you begin to wear it! It's like having custom-molded shoes fitted to your feet. And, because you can easily transfer ARCH-EASE into any pair of shoes, it makes all your shoes feel as if they had been custom-molded!

ARCH-EASE not only supports and raises your arch; it takes the pressure off bunions, corns, hammer-toes, and other foot problems... to relieve the agony they can cause! The bones and muscles in your foot and lower leg can work the way nature intended them to, without artificial stresses and strains! So you enjoy the foot comfort you've been praying for... without shelling out good money for expensive molded shoes!

ARCH-EASE's top layer is another comfortable surprise. It's designed to reduce the friction between your stockings and your shoe. So it helps to do away with that burning heat that turns your feet into "hot dogs"!

ARCH-EASE custom-molded foot shock-absorbers— for over 25 Years

LEBANESE DEFER VOTE ON LEADER

Set May 8 Election After Leftist-Muslim Protests

By JAMES M. MARKHAM
Special to The New York Times
BEIRUT, Lebanon, April 30—The Speaker of the Lebanese Parliament tonight announced a week's postponement of a special session for the election of a new president.

The decision was a rebuff to a Syrian-backed timetable to find a solution to the year-old civil war, and a tactical victory for a left-of-center alliance that had insisted that the meeting be postponed.

The conflict, which has taken thousands of lives and caused severe destruction, basically has been a confused struggle between Muslims and Christians with leftist and rightist elements. The Muslims insist on more political power.

Today, Mr. Jumblat endorsed the main rival of Mr. Sarkis, Raymond Ede, an outspoken Christian moderate who has considerable Moslem support.

Mr. Assad, the Parliament Speaker, has been leading a search for a compromise candidate in place of Mr. Ede and Mr. Sarkis to avoid, as he put it, "an explosion."

Lisbon Acts on Autonomy for Islands

pected to affect the American air base at Lajes on the Azores island of Terceira. The mostly conservative islanders, while opposing their separatist campaign, have never questioned the existence of the base but have demanded that any economic benefits resulting from it be turned over to the islanders.

In addition, the present Government of Prime Minister José Pinheiro de Azevedo has indicated its approval of the continued American presence in the Azores. The Lisbon Government, which is due to retain considerable control over the islands under the autonomy arrangements, has remained committed to Portugal's membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Campaign Has Waned
Commenting on the results of last Sunday's Portuguese general elections, the Navy Chief of Staff, Adm. Augusto Souto Silva Cruz, said in an interview that because of the prospect that the nation will get a new civilian government without Communist participation he expected a full reintegration of Portugal into NATO.

Some NATO secrets had been withheld from Portugal when Communists held important posts in the Government.

The separatist movement in the islands had gained momentum during Portugal's swing to the left last year. But islanders who arrived here this week say that the campaign has waned since the nation moved toward the center since the Government began its conservative turn.

As police forces covered the center of the capital, about 60 persons were estimated to have been arrested tonight and taken to police headquarters in hand-cuffs. They had attempted to gather near the Atocha railroad station, to which trains from the industrial suburbs come.

Everywhere in Spain, local authorities had instructions to treat as subversive all efforts by non-legal labor groups to meet. At least in the Madrid area, the police were supported by part of the main armored division that is stationed there.

The division was confined to barracks yesterday, as were other military units that were alerted today.

It was believed that an army alert was called in Barcelona, where a few thousand of some 35,000 striking metalworkers clashed with police. They had tried to march through the center of the city. More dis-ordered and taken turbances were expected tomorrow in both Madrid and Barcelona.

High Court Again Bars Election Fund Release

WASHINGTON, April 30 (AP)—The Supreme Court refused today, for the second time in eight days, to clear the way for payment of some $23 million in Federal matching funds to Presidential candidates.

The next move in the controversy over the Government campaign subsidies appeared to be up to Congress, which is expected to begin final stages of action next week on a bill to permit their resumption.

The new appeal was made by the six Democratic candidates and Ronald Reagan, a Republican, whose actions were rejected by the Justices a week ago and by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on Wednesday.

The legal and legislative maneuvering arose in the wake of a Jan. 30 Supreme Court decision that the Federal Election Commission must be reconstituted.

Mr. Frantich's removal has been a principal demand of Moslem and leftist groups. On April 10, Parliament voted a special amendment permitting the election of a new president, which the stubborn head of which represents 101 temples state finally signed six days ago.

Military Is Alerted In Uneasy Madrid On Eve of May Day

By HENRY GINGER
Special to The New York Times

MADRID, April 30—Military forces were placed on the alert today in the Madrid area as the Government continued to crack down on all efforts by opposition labor groups to demonstrate in observance of May Day, a tradition common to most European countries.

As police forces covered the center of the capital, about 60 persons were estimated to have been arrested tonight and taken to police headquarters in hand-cuffs. They had attempted to gather near the Atocha railroad station, to which trains from the industrial suburbs come.

Ford Believed to Have Cut Reagan Strength in Texas

By JAMES P. STERBA

HOUSTON, April 30—Political leaders here believe that heavy last-minute campaigning by President Ford has cut substantially into Ronald Reagan's early lead in Texas, turning tomorrow's Presidential primary into a cliff-hanger that they said was too close to call.

The President, obviously buoyed by overflow crowds at rallies, told Republican workers in Abilene tonight that his momentum would grow "between now and 7 P.M. tomorrow night" when the polls close. He added: "We're going to surprise them. We're going to make this race one that we can win."

While Ray Hutchison, the state Republican chairman, told Mr. Reagan in Dallas earlier today that he believed the former California Governor still held an edge, other officials were privately revising earlier predictions that he would win by a wide margin.

Both candidates have campaigned hard and have spent heavily on radio and television advertisements. But the President has drawn larger if not more enthusiastic crowds, leading some observers to believe Mr. Reagan may have peaked too early. A victory in Texas is regarded as crucial to the continuation of a viable Reagan campaign.

Democrats, meanwhile, believe the momentum of Jimmy Carter's victory Tuesday in Pennsylvania could push him ahead of Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, who is running as a favorite son. They were further enhanced by Senator Hubert H. Humphrey's decision yesterday not to enter the campaign.

Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, the only other contender on the Democratic ballot, is expected to finish a distant third. The Democrats are electing 98 convention delegates.

Although Democrats have dominated previous primaries in Texas, this is the state's first Presidential primary and Republicans expect a record turnout, with substantial numbers of Democrats crossing party lines to choose among delegate slates for Mr. Ford and Mr. Reagan.

The Texas primary is comparable to the one in New York. There is no preferential contest among the candidates; the Presidential balloting will be entirely for convention delegates, with a few in each party to be chosen later at state conventions.

Ford Is Optimistic
Mr. Reagan has aimed appeals at Governor Wallace's conservative Democratic supporters, while President Ford hopes to gain votes among moderately conservative Democrats and independents who usually do not vote in primaries.

With Mr. Carter, the former Governor of Georgia, the only main contender on the Democratic ballot, and with no major state-wide Democratic contests this year, Republican leaders predict that the Republican vote may top 300,000 tomorrow. However, there are many local Democratic contests for such jobs as Congressman, sheriff and county judge that may limit the crossover vote.

The Democrats expect 1 million to 2 million voters to cast Democratic ballots for their party. There are about 5.3 million registered voters in Texas, but they are not required to register by party affiliation.

The President said today he was "very optimistic," but he refrained from predicting a victory. In Dallas this morning, he told reporters: "Coming on the first of May, it is sort of a runner-up week that will follow. I can't say precisely that what Texas does will be followed by other states, but certainly it will be a headliner."

In tomorrow's election, each Republican candidate has a list of four potential delegate candidates on the ballot in each of the state's 24 Congressional districts. The top four vote-getters in each district will become convention delegates.

The Democrats' 98 delegates are being chosen in 31 state senatorial districts, with three or four delegate candidates on the ballot for each Congressional district, and in some districts, candidates who are uncommitted to any candidate.

Every delegate candidate is clearly identified with the candidate he or she is pledged to support at the convention. In Houston, for example, the Republican delegate for Ronald Reagan and Robert Ald Ford. Three more delegates for each candidate are listed the same way.

Choosing two delegates for the President and two for Mr. Reagan, his ballot is, in effect, nullified. Republican officials have been urging voters to choose all four delegates for one candidate or the other.

Since the Democrats and Republicans have both separate ballots and separate polling places, votes cannot be split between parties. If a Democrat votes Republican, he cannot vote in Democratic run-off elections but he can vote Democratic in the November general election.

Vote counting will also be slow because in more than half of the state's 254 counties, voters will be marking paper ballots.

The Presidential primary tomorrow is a one-time affair except last year by the Texas Legislature to help Senator Benenson's bid for the Presidency. But he dropped out of that race in February, and is running tomorrow as both a favorite son in the Presidential primary and as a candidate for re-election to the Senate.

Mr. Benenson is backed by all of the state's top Democratic officials except Bob Armstrong, the Texas Land Commissioner, who defected to run Mr. Carter's campaign. Mr. Benenson's delegate slates include most of the popular leaders in each district, including many blacks, Mexican-Americans and women.

Mr. Carter has delegate slates in all 31 districts. His backers believe his Pennsylvania victory plus recent attention given to his religious beliefs will help him get votes. As a "born-again" Baptist, he has appealed among many of the estimated 2.2 million Southern Baptist church members in Texas.

There are another million or so Baptists in other congregations. Mr. Wallace also has delegates in all 31 districts. Fred R. Harris, the former Oklahoma Governor, who dropped out of the campaign, is represented in 14, while Ellen McCormack, the anti-abortion candidate, has five slates. Sargent Shriver, the one-time Peace Corps director, who also dropped out, pledged his four slates as uncommitted, giving liberals in the state uncommitted delegate slates in 22 districts.

After voting in the primary, Democrats will hold precinct caucuses as the first step in picking an additional 32 at-large delegates and 70 alternates to the national convention. Those delegates and alternates will be selected at the Democratic convention on June 19 in Houston.

Carter, in Texas, Asserts Ford Has Failed to Give Leadership

By DOUGLAS E. KNEELAND

AUSTIN, Tex., April 30—Jimmy Carter, on his final campaign swing through Texas before the Democratic Presidential primary tomorrow, accused President Ford today of failing to provide the necessary leadership for the country in either domestic or foreign affairs.

In one of his sharpest attacks on the Republican President in his long months of running for the Democratic nomination, the former Georgia Governor said: "At this point the country's drifting because there's no leadership. We don't need a caretaker in the White House, but that's what we've got."

Aides conceded that Mr. Carter was beginning to focus his aim on the President because his two principal active rivals for the nomination, Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington and Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona, had obviously been weakened by the decisive Carter victory over them in Pennsylvania on Tuesday.

With Senator Hubert H. Humphrey's announced decision yesterday not to run in the New Jersey primary June 8, Mr. Carter was faced with the possibility of diminished interest in his campaign if he had little more than scattered opposition from his badly wounded earlier opponents or from favorite sons, such as Senator Lloyd M. Bentsen here in Texas and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in California.

Shifting his attacks to Mr. Ford, his advisers acknowledge, could sustain interest in his candidacy and also help him gain more support from members of regular Democratic organizations who expect the President to be their party's opponent in the fall.

Mr. Carter's criticism of the President, both at a news conference in Dallas and after a speech to a crowd of about 800 persons in the House of Representatives chambers here, came in answer to questions about his reaction to Mr. Ford's remarks yesterday that he thought he could defeat the Georgian in a general election because of his "inexperience."

"President Ford has a great deal of experience," he said here with a smile, "35 or 40 years. I don't recall anything you don't like about Washington. I suggest you blame on him."

He then accused the President of having failed to put forth any programs to deal with such problems as recession, inflation or the energy shortage.

At the earlier news conference, in an attack reminiscent has cut into the early strength of his opponent, Ronald Reagan. (Page 10)

The late-afternoon announcement of Senator Jackson's planned flight to Seattle followed two days of intense meetings with staff and advisers "relative to those [Mr. Jackson's] plans," according to Brian Corcoran, the Senator's press secretary. It also followed an announcement in Indianapolis that his campaign headquarters there would be closed by tomorrow, three days before the Indiana primary, in which he was entered.

Rumors of impending withdrawal from active candidacy had been circulating widely since Senator Jackson's disappointing second-place finish Tuesday in the Pennsylvania preferential primary and his apparent third place in the contest for convention delegates. He had counted on heavy support there to increase his chances, and the results were an undeniable blow to his hopes.

Mr. Corcoran refused to confirm or deny the rumors that tomorrow's statement in Seattle would be a withdrawal statement, saying that the withdrawal would be too complicated. All he said was that the Senator "will make a statement" concerning his plans for the period leading up to the July 19 in Houston.

His wife, Helen, had reportedly been urging him for several days to get out of the race. Asked to comment on these rumors, Mrs. Jackson said, "Well, I'll neither confirm nor deny" the report.

The 63-year-old Mr. Jackson, making his second try for his party's nomination, has been an indefatigable campaigner. A typical day's campaigning in February, for example, started in Boston, continued with two hours in New York City, and finished late that night in Tampa, Fla., after several evening appearances there.

He was the first candidate to make foreign policy a major issue, denouncing détente as a "one-way street" that benefited the Soviet Union far more than the United States and promising a hard-line approach to the Russians.

Asked about Mr. Humphrey's suggestion yesterday that he would help "educate" him on some of the issues of the day, Mr. Carter replied: "I don't find fault with that. I think of all the people I've known in politics, he's probably my favorite. I consider him my friend. I look forward to his advice and counsel and eventually his open support."

As he was about to leave Austin for San Antonio, the almost obsessively punctual Mr. Carter lost 20 minutes of his time in a light fixture forced still to go. It is vital that there be no stampede, no rush to judgment.

Udall Seeks Supporters
(AP)—Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona, in a statement issued tonight after the first reports of Mr. Jackson's withdrawal arose, asked for support from backers of the Senator.

"If the report is true," Mr. Udall said, "it engraves in granite that the race for the Democratic nomination in most of the remaining states is now essentially down to Jimmy Carter and me. We have 20 states left to go. It is vital that there be no stampede, no rush to judgment."

BROWN, ALI SPAR NEAR BALTIMORE

California Governor Plagued by Scheduling Problems

By BEN A. FRANKLIN

LANHAM, Md., April 30—Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, crowned with Muhammad Ali today, wooed leaders, shook hands with field workers and toured a Baltimore housing project, as he roamed across Maryland in his late bid for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

On the second full day of "around," Mr. Brown suffered through a series of scheduling mistakes. He kept a breakfast meeting of Maryland labor leaders waiting for nearly an hour this morning; his lunch hour visit to the plant gate of a sprawling Bethlehem Steel works near Baltimore missed an afternoon shift change; he kept Mr. Ali waiting here for an hour that was apparently the heavy-weight champion's afternoon nap time, before his fight tonight at Capital Center.

When Mr. Brown finally arrived here from a private meeting with the editors of The Baltimore Sun, The champion aptly named with the Governor, sleepily and subdued, at a three-minute news conference at the Sheraton-Lanham Motel.

"He stopped all in to wish me luck," Mr. Ali said in a barely audible voice. "A friend of mine told me he was here in Maryland. I wanted to meet him because he's a young guy like me and pretty."

As Mr. Brown said, "Good luck, Ali," the boxer said, "I've had a lot of impossible fights and he's got an impossible fight."

Gov. Brown said the meeting was "all part of the unfolding Maryland campaign." He drew some laughs in the room jammed with sports reporters and the champion's retinue.

"I told President Ford that I like the White House," Mr. Ali put in, "I like the job. And if we put together the colored people, I'm hanging around here and might be the first colored President." There was more laughter.

Asked About Interrupted
Later, as he prepared to fly to a rally in Salisbury, 100 miles away on Maryland's Eastern Shore, Mr. Brown was asked why he had interrupted his schedule to spar with Mr. Ali.

"I need the exposure," Mr. Brown replied, adding that "it's a terribly short time" before the May 18 primary. He seemed to be embarrassed.

The appearance with Mr. Ali also seemed to reflect Mr. Brown's often unorthodox attitude toward politics.

The Governor, who prefers his bachelor apartment to California's state-owned Governor's house, was asked last night in Silver Spring, a Maryland suburb of Washington, whether he would live in the White House if he became President.

"Well, I like the neighborhood; it's convenient to work," he said to laughter. "But I might look around."

Serious Side
There was no doubt today, however, as he campaigned in Baltimore, that Mr. Brown was serious about his candidacy. After visiting a black public housing complex for the elderly in Baltimore, he spoke in a black church basement with obvious feeling, a response, perhaps, to the handmade placards that said, "Black and Brown Are Beautiful."

The talk began with some stock phrases: politicians today, the Governor said, have "given us too much verbal cellophane, inflated rhetoric; our problems are enormous and there are no magic solutions; but we must have the political will to redress them because 'it's not just a question of social justice, it's a question of the survival of the planet.'"

"As I approach the White House," Mr. Brown said, "I do so because I see that the American people have lost a lot of hope and faith in the future. I won't try to oversell you, the problems are difficult and will take time."

FORD AGAIN SCORES VIEWS OF REAGAN

President in Texas, Finds Opponent's Credibility Is 'Severely at Stake'

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON

LUBBOCK, Tex., April 30—President Ford completed his Texas primary campaign today after charging that Ronald Reagan's "credibility is severely at stake" in the debate over national security policy.

He also said that the former California Governor, his rival in the Texas Republican primary, was "very inaccurate" in disputing the strength of the nation's economic recovery.

Winding up his most energetic political trip to date, Mr. Ford met large and friendly audiences in rainswept Dallas, Lubbock and Abilene.

The four-day campaign trek ended much as it began, with the President rejecting Mr. Reagan's contention that the United States had slipped behind the Soviet Union in military might.

More than 10,000 people in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum cheered Mr. Ford's pledge to make certain that American defenses remained "unsurpassed."

He went on to recite quotations attributed to Mr. Reagan last November, when the former Governor began his candidacy for the Republican nomination.

Cites Interviews
In two instances, the President said, Mr. Reagan told interviewers he was unable to say how much money should be allocated for national defense because "there are facts not known to anyone not privy to classified information."

"My friends," Mr. Ford said, "you here today that any candidate who begins his campaign by saying he doesn't know enough about national defense to talk about it and then, in the heat of battle, suddenly tries to make it the central issue, can hardly expect American people to take him very seriously."

Earlier, in a television interview in Dallas, Mr. Ford referred to the Reagan quotations and added: "My opponent is making allegations that the United States is in a state of economic decline. He doesn't have the information to make a credible recommendation as to what we should do."

Accordingly, he said, "his credibility is severely at stake."

Very Inaccurate
When the President arrived here in a driving rain this afternoon, a reporter asked him to comment on one of Mr. Reagan's standard campaign phrases, that the economy was "sick and that the only difference between New York City and Washington is that Washington is printing press" to produce currency.

"It is a very inaccurate comment," Mr. Ford said. "The rate of inflation has been cut from more than 12 percent when he became President in 1974 to less than 3 percent in the first quarter of this year."

"I am amazed that Governor Reagan wouldn't understand the difference between a 12 percent rate of inflation and under 3 percent," he said.

Mr. Ford appeared in a buoyant mood as he wound down his Texas campaign. He wore a large button on his suitcoat that said, "Big, Friendly Lubbock." At the city's airport, he leaned over to kiss each of 15 teen-age girls, members of a high school band unit, and then grinned broadly.

He said in Dallas that he was encouraged by the large crowds greeting him. But members of Mr. Ford's entourage wondered how many people met him out of curiosity rather than political support.

In Lubbock, nearly half the audience in the Coliseum left after Mr. Ford read some remarks and before some listeners began asking him questions. The same thing occurred two nights earlier in Houston.

Soviet Bars BBC Chief, Cites Solzhenitsyn Talk
LONDON, April 30 (AP)—The Soviet Union today barred a visit by the head of the British Broadcasting Corporation in a protest over views expressed by Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, the exiled writer, during an interview.

Sir Charles Curran, the BBC head, was scheduled to fly to Moscow on Sunday for a five-day official visit to discuss joint production of television programs. The project has been postponed indefinitely.

The Soviet position was outlined in a note by Sergei G. Lapin, chairman of the Soviet Committee for Radio and Television.

Mr. Lapin objected in particular to a Solzhenitsyn interview with the BBC on its latest book, "Lenin in Zurich." Mr. Lapin said the program had slandered the Soviet Union and was a confirmation that BBC "continues its cold war tactics."

Reagan Attacks Kissin For His Stand on Rhodesia

By JON NORDHEIMER

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 30—Ronald Reagan said today that time was needed to resolve the political and social issues of Rhodesia, and he cautioned the Ford Administration to avoid "impulsive reactions" that could incite bloodshed there.

The Republican Presidential candidate, completing his final appeal for votes in tomorrow's Texas primary, declared that Kissinger had "undercut the possibility for a just and orderly settlement" of the problems in Rhodesia by calling for black majority rule within two years.

Moreover, the former California Governor told a lunch-hour crowd of 3,000 people outside the Alamo that political "overlook the protection of minority rights as well as insure full majority participation."

He also denounced any move to repeal the Byrd Amendment, which, despite United Nations sanctions, permits this country to import Rhodesian chrome, an essential metal.

Repeal of the amendment, which he said Mr. Kissinger was urging on the Ford Administration, would make this country more dependent on the Soviet Union, another major source of chrome.

"In 1967 through 1971, we obeyed U.N. sanctions and did not buy chrome from Russia," he told the crowd, "and Russia doubled the price. Now, Kissinger would make us once more totally dependent upon the Soviets at a time when they are intent on outbuilding us militarily."

Appeal to Democrats Seen
Rhodesia has been building all week as a national issue as Mr. Kissinger traveled in Africa. By raising the issue on the eve of the Texas primary, which most observers here believe Mr. Reagan must win if he challenges to President Ford, he appeared to be aiming his appeal at least in part, to George Wallace Democrats, whose support he has actively sought. Democrats can vote for Republican candidates in the primary.

"I must express my concern over what appears to be a massive shift in U.S. policy in southern Africa as announced by Secretary Kissinger on Tuesday," he declared. "We seem to be embarking on a policy of stating to the people of southern Africa and running the risk of increased violence and bloodshed in an area already beset by tremendous antagonism and difficulties."

"It is imperative that we avoid impulsive reactions in a potentially explosive situation. The peoples of Rhodesia—black and white—have never been our enemies. They fought with us in World War II against Hitler and in the Pacific. If they show a creative attitude that can lead to a peaceful settlement of themselves and others, should avoid rhetoric or actions that could trigger chaos or violence. They have special problems which will require time to solve."

"We're not going to cure the ills of the world overnight. The great issue of racial justice is as vital here at home as it is in Africa, and it would be well to make sure our own house is in order before we fly off to other lands to attempt to dictate policies to them."

Mr. Kissinger's declaration of America's "unrelenting opposition" to the Government in Rhodesia, Mr. Reagan continued, has hurt efforts to solve the issue peacefully.

Chilean's Extradition STOCKHOLM, April 30—Sweden has asked the United States to extradite Nelson A. Rockefeller, a Chilean leader of the left movement, the Ministry said yesterday. It was clear that the Chilean government was seeking Mr. Rockefeller's return for political reasons.

Jersey Labor Chief Hails Carter In First Hint of Shift by U

By RONALD SULLIVAN

TRENTON, April 30—The New Jersey A.F.L.-C.I.O. had its first kind words today for Jimmy Carter.

Charles Marcianite, the state federation president, said he had "the greatest admiration for Mr. Carter's primary performance to date. The labor leader also said, 'believe me, there is no other group more intent on defeating President Ford in November than organized labor. If Mr. Carter can accomplish that, then we're all for it.'"

Mr. Marcianite's remarks were the first public evidence that he or any other top labor leader in New Jersey were prepared to support the former Georgia Governor who now seems headed for another major primary victory in New Jersey next month.

However, Mr. Marcianite said that Mr. Carter had only proved he could win 30 percent of the Democratic delegates in the primaries held thus far and that "it's not the kind of mandate that will get him very far in November."

Top Candidates Lagging
Organized labor in New Jersey was counting on two candidates: Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington and Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota. However, Senator Jackson has suffered a series of defeats and Senator Humphrey refused yesterday to become an active candidate and enter the New Jersey primary.

As a consequence, labor leaders in New Jersey face the prospect of going into the primary here without a candidate. Few, if any, labor leaders, have expressed interest in Mr. Carter's brief, conciliatory run by the state head of the American Federation of Labor Congress of Industrial Organizations.

In the same state, however, Mr. M. Marcianite charged that Dan Gearty, New Jersey campaign for Mr. Carter, was credit in the party by a State Senator James P. McGowan, the Democratic state leader who has been leading Humphrey drive in New Jersey. Mr. Gearty accused Mr. McGowan of bossism yesterday. McGowan said today: "I represent a type of splendor that led to Gen. Gearty's post-convention lapse in 1972."

Finally, the Carter campaign announced that the Georgia Governor would here next Thursday at a raising dinner on the same Mr. Humphrey is scheduled to appear at a Congressional raising dinner for Representative Andrew Maguire of County.

While Carter officials say any comment, the schedule of the Georgian's appearance in East Brunswick was intended to be a Democratic gambit calculated to deprive Mr. Humphrey political in fact his appearance was expected to greatly

A Father's Charge of Campus Promiscuity Upsets Wellesley

By NAN ROBERTSON

WELLESLEY, Mass. — A father's charges that "sexual immorality" and promiscuity are being taught Wellesley College students "24 hours a day, seven days a week" through unlimited dormitory visiting hours have provoked shock, anger and dismay both on and off this century-old campus.

The accusations and more were contained in a letter sent March 31 to all parents at the noted women-only college. One copy was forwarded to the administration as a courtesy only.

Strong reaction has pitted the father, John W. Galbraith of Saddle River, N.J., whose daughter, Rachel, will be graduated from Wellesley this month, and like-minded parents, against Wellesley's president, the board of trustees and the alumnae association and what appears to be the overwhelming majority of the students. Only one of the college's 2,000 students has come out publicly in support of Mr. Galbraith.

Those opposed to Mr. Galbraith have made their views known in interviews conducted this week on the Wellesley campus. Statements published in the student newspaper and letters sent to all parents and students by Wellesley's president, Barbara Newell, and the student senate. The trustees and the alumnae have passed resolutions supporting decisions by the college administration and students on dormitory life. Further, the college has received 60 letters from parents, all but three condemning Mr. Galbraith's charges as unfair and incorrect.

Weekend Meeting Set

Still unknown is the degree of support in the 400 responses Mr. Galbraith says he has received from parents. Reached by telephone at home, he refused to comment in any way on the letter or the storm it has aroused. He and a parents committee are due to meet this weekend at Wellesley with Dr. Newell.

Mr. Galbraith's daughter, Rachel, did not want to talk either. "I feel that anything I say will work against my parents or my school; I love my parents and I love Wellesley," she said. It's all terribly unfortunate.

The father's letter contended that "the peer pressure that now prevails" at Wellesley would bend the students, almost all of whom chose to live in on-campus dormitories, "into promiscuous, unhealthy or unnatural sex habits."

It pictured "unknown men of unknown ethics" wandering the halls, sun-camped with partners in sin in the rooms, and sharing bathrooms "dressed and undressed." It accused the faculty abandoning their surrogate parental and trustees "in the last five years" of "obligation to provide a moral environment," which Mr. Galbraith said they had upheld for the previous 95 years.

The letter asked parents to sign either of the two enclosed petitions that would be "brought before the trustees." The first states that adherents are "opposed to the sexual freedom permitted in the dormitories" and calls for at least one dormitory complex to be set aside "in which men are not permitted in the girls' living quarters . . . as a first step towards a return to sexual morality at Wellesley."

The second states, "We are not opposed to the sexual freedom permitted in the dormitories at Wellesley." Mr. Galbraith's descriptions of premarital sex rampant at Wellesley have been attacked as not only erroneous and absurd but also "dangerous" and "upsetting" to parents and students alike. Many students telephoned their parents immediately after seeing a copy of the letter passed about or published in the April 9 issue of The Wellesley News. Parental reactions ranged, according to the daughters, from worry or disgust about the letter to trust in the young people.

In interviews, it was also called particularly ironic that such charges had been leveled against Wellesley. Some characterized the letter as additionally "profoundly sexist," with one stating that "it would never have been written to parents of sons at Harvard, Yale or Princeton."

Wellesley students consider their living conditions cloistered compared with other, coed colleges. There is a strict system of "bell desk" control and no guest, male or female, may go anywhere unescorted at any time within the dorms.

Unlimited visiting hours have been at effect at Wellesley since 1970. Moreover, for the last three years, the college has polled all students asking their wishes on "limited-interest" corridors such as a "quiet" corridor, a "French-speaking" corridor or a corridor with restricted visiting hours.

The visiting restriction option has invariably placed last among student preferences.

Sharon Kay Collins, a junior and editor in chief of The Wellesley News, said "That's the real irony about all this. The administration would be happy to provide limited visiting hours, but they can't get enough students together to live like that in one hall, let alone a whole dormitory. Wellesley has 13 dormitories for its 2,000 students."

Teresa Moore, a freshman and the sole student to speak up publicly in favor of Mr. Galbraith, said, "I object to premarital sex." She said she would "certainly choose to live" in a dorm "in which male overnight guests are not allowed."

She said that 40 students had signed a petition she had circulated urging a restricted corridor but that "only six said they would be able to live on such a corridor next year" because of other arrangements already made.

Miss Moore said her father had responded to Mr. Galbraith's petition, saying he "didn't like the atmosphere of sexual immorality" at Wellesley, whatever that is. She added that "I haven't experienced any peer pressure at all" because of her views.

Susanna Klein, a graduating senior, told Mr. Galbraith in a letter that was also printed in the student newspaper, "Your ignorance is only exceeded by your overwhelming presumption. In the future I hope you will address your complaints directly to Wellesley students, and not spread ridiculous rumors to their parents."

She said that she had lived in three dormitories over four years and that "I have never seen a naked man, other than in the privacy of my own room."

Miss Klein expressed puzzlement over Mr. Galbraith's reference to "unnatural sex habits," saying, "It only occurs to me that with the removal of all men from campus, you might witness more so-called unnatural acts than previously."

Making Decisions Together

The student, the oldest of three daughters, said her mother "never let me entertain boys in my room" but called her parents' attitudes less conservative than most, even though "they wouldn't condone promiscuity and immorality." She said of them:

"When they sent me off to college, they trusted me. I don't think I've betrayed them in any way."

Others called Mr. Galbraith's statements "slander" against the college and its students.

Joice Wadlington, director of residence halls (dormitories), said she had been in the corridors day and night regularly for three years and usually dined with students. "Mr. Galbraith's picture of residence life here does not match mine at all," she said. "At first I was amused. Then I realized how very serious his statements were."

Others pointed out the extraordinary stress on students and staff working together and making decisions together. The ratio of faculty to students is one to 10, and as one student put it: "If you read your hand held here, there's always someone to do it."

Copies of parents' responses to the Galbraith letter in the college files express both sympathy and outrage. "I empathize with your parental concern," Frederick J. Fawcett 2d wrote Mr. Galbraith. "But if my concern has not enabled me to instill in my children by the time they go away to college a knowledge of their own worth and of my very high esteem for them . . . the strength to conduct themselves . . . in their own best interests—or where to find such strength if their own seems to falter." Then he had failed.

On the contrary, he said, he was "trusting and proud of his daughter," nor do I think our daughters are now being taught sexual immorality at Wellesley.

Lila Barbash Horwitz, a 1950 graduate whose daughter is a senior, told Mr. Galbraith, "You describe the dormitories as though they were houses of ill repute . . . you tell our daughters shorts! I choose to believe that my daughters and others like them will reject peer pressure as they have in the past when they were exposed to drugs, cheating, lying, and other aspects of behavior which are violative of personal moral code.

"But I also believe that these women are old enough to face what may be an embarrassing situation that they must learn to cope with . . . that coping — is an essential education."

Phyllis Douglass

"My parents thought it was ridiculous—a personal vendetta."

Amy Fawcett

"If you haven't learned what's right and wrong by the time you get here you won't make it."

In Bicentennial Year, the Colonial Dames Have a Lot to Cheer About Her

By JUDY KLEMESRUD

One of the country's most exclusive organizations, the Colonial Dames of America, held its annual luncheon meeting here yesterday, and this time it was more than just another catered luncheon of cold fried chicken and latouille.

You see, this is the Bicentennial year, an event in itself that makes the 2,000 "dames" blue blood flow fast. And it is also the year that marked the completion of the Dames' new auditorium attached to the national headquarters, at 417 East 51st Street.

The Dames, many of them dressed in red, white and blue dresses, and almost all of them wearing gold medals bearing the date May 23, 1807 (when the society was founded), gathered in a picturesque flower garden behind the headquarters yesterday for pre-luncheon cocktails.

Some of them discussed what it means to be a Dame in 1976, and others gave their opinions on the state of the union.

"What we are trying to do is keep the memories of the Revolutionary War alive so that young people won't forget their heritage," said silver-haired Emma K. Mitchell, of the California chapter. "I believe in my heart that young people, after they've traveled abroad, finally know how wonderful America is, how free it is."

Does she think that anything is wrong with America? "Well, I'm very against abortion," she said, "and I don't like girls and boys living together before they're married. But I'm always proud of America."

Mildred Bartels of Dubuque, Iowa, president of the Iowa chapter, said she thought her ancestors would be proud of the great progress America had made since 1776.

"But I am disappointed in the moral breakdown, the crime, and the fact that family life is sort of falling apart," she said. "But all in all, it's the greatest country in the world, and I love it dearly."

And as Polly Logan of Washington sees it, there is nothing wrong with this country, she couldn't be cured by "a strong and wonderful leader who would take us through our darkest days."

Any suggestions? "I can't say," she answered, grinning mischievously. "I'm from Washington and I'd get in trouble."

The Dames' pride and joy is the Abigail Adams Smith museum, a former coach house built in 1790 and now restored as an early 19th-century New York home. The quaint old gray stone museum, named after President John Adams's daughter, who once lived on the grounds, is next door to the Dames' headquarters at 421 East 61st Street. It is open to the public weekdays from 10 A.M. to 4 P.M.

"It is one of only seven 18th-century buildings in the city," Anne Glen Vietor, of

New York and New Haven, said proudly. "One two of the seven have gardens, and the other is Grace Mansion."

Becoming a member of the Colonial Dames of America is not an easy task. First, one has to have had an ancestor who lived in America before the Battle of Lexington, which was on April 19, 1775. This cannot be just any old ancestor. The ancestor has to have been either an officer in the Colonial Army or an elected local official.

If one can prove such an ancestor existed, then one has to get written recommendations from five members of the Dames' chapter that one wishes to join. (Only two recommendations are needed if the woman is the daughter or granddaughter of a member.)

Transferring a membership from one chapter to another is not that easy, either. "One member moved here from Texas and didn't know anyone to recommend her," said

Charlotte Miller of New York, a vice president of the society. "So she volunteered to be a guide at the museum for a year and a half, and got to know the members that way."

Today, the Dames have a membership of about 2,000 in 15 chapters. A rival society, the National Society of Colonial Dames, which was founded in 1893 and has similar membership requirements, has about 10,000 members in 42 state societies. It has its headquarters in Washington.

"We're great friends back and forth," said Courtney Iglehart of New York, president of the Colonial Dames of America. "We had a joint lecture last fall, and we're having a joint party in May in our new auditorium."

However, some members insisted that the rivalry still existed and that it stemmed back to arguments over whether the descendants of Benjamin Franklin and his common-law wife should be admitted to the society. (The Colonial Dames of America said no; the National Society said yes.)

Others said the split was caused because a group of women in Philadelphia, later formed the National Society, refused to be associated with an organization that was headquartered in New York City.

"Everything seems to fine between us now," Mrs. Logan of the Washington chapter. "At a meeting in Washington, I met next to the president of the National Society. We got along fine. I gave her a ride in my car. So far as I can see, there's no conflict."

Some women, like Mrs. Vietor, are members of both groups. "When I joined National Society 25 years ago, my mother was horrified and thought I had gone the enemy camp," she said. "But today, the two groups have pretty much the same aims and objectives."

Scholarship is Sponsored Among the events of Colonial Dames of America during the year is a historical lecture series, egg-nog party at Christmas, garden party, a scholarship program and a book award program.

One thing they do not do, Mrs. Mitchell said, is give their names in the social columns. "We're just in that type of women," she said. "The only one you recognize here today is Mr. Edward Cox."

Mrs. Cox, the mother-in-law of Tricia Nixon Cox, was among those dames who were asked what the thought of the state of the union.

"I really don't want to say anything about that," she said. "But I really am pleased with the efforts we've made to restore the Abigail Adams Smith museum. It's a shame that the building is standing today is an absolute miracle!"

Wellfleet Oysters: Comeback Time?

WELLFLEET, Mass., April 30 — The Wellfleet oyster, once world famous, is trying to make a comeback.

The announced goal of this Cape Cod town's Selectmen, executive secretary Richard St. Plante, and its shellfish warden, Billy Chapman, is nothing less than to "restore the status once held by the community as the oyster capital of the world."

Oldtimers recall the days when Wellfleet was an international byword with oysters. Diamond Jim Brady, a celebrated gourmet and dandy at the turn of the century, reportedly would eat nothing but Wellfleet oysters. He would go to Belmont's in New York and demand a fish of succulent, fresh, raw Wellfleet oysters on the half shell. On occasion, Brady would snuff the bivalves suspiciously and order them returned to the kitchen roaring, "Those aren't Wellfleet oysters."

Oysters and Wellfleet were synonymous from the time the town was founded in 1664. The delicacies were wildly abundant and a favorite with Indians and settlers. Some of the oysters were a foot long. In subsequent years, oysters were a major industry in Wellfleet and were shipped throughout the world, famed for their flavor and texture.

Eventually, however, the industry faded. Young oysters need something to attach themselves to in order to grow or they will float away. They prefer the shells of other oysters, but the shells of harvested oysters were used for the manufacture of fertilizer and plaster.

By the end of World War I the great days of the Wellfleet oyster were largely a memory. There were only about enough in subsequent years to supply the Boston market, and for licensed townspeople and tourists to harvest a few for table use.

Last year the oyster itself seemed ready for a comeback as a tremendous spawning appeared. One shell was found with 45 young oysters attached to it. A single female can shed 300 eggs in a summer, of which possibly a half dozen or so will live.

No one is sure why last year's set was so heavy, but it probably had to do with unusually favorable weather conditions.

Wellfleet has long been noted for its ideal shellfish environment: shallow water of moderate temperature influenced by the Labrador current, mild winters, reduced salinity due to fresh water sources feeding into the bay, a high tide fall (10 to 12 feet), and a setting that provides a funneling action that sweeps in oyster spawn from other areas and nutrients to feed the young creatures.

Mr. Plante sees a revival of the oyster industry providing Wellfleet's depressed economy with a boost. "The potential is incredible," he said. "It could be a multi-million dollar industry. Last year's set of spat (spawn) was conservatively valued at $5 million. A lot of people don't realize what's out there . . ."

Cunningham's Isolation From Power

By FRANK LYNN. Despite Patrick J. Cunningham's re-election as Democratic state chairman, he is still cut off from direct communication with Governor Carey in a crucial period when the state Democratic party will start the process of selecting a candidate for the United States Senate and prepare to serve as host to the Democratic National Convention.

dealings with the Legislature, particularly New York City Democratic legislators who are often swayed by their county leaders. The Carey aides admitted that the Governor needed a professional like Mr. Cunningham to keep Democratic legislators in line and avoid stunning defeats for Mr. Carey as the overriding of his veto of the Stavisky bill and the State Senate's rejection of his appointee, Herman Schwartz, to be chairman of the state's Correction Commission.

the party as former Mayor Robert F. Wagner or former Gov. W. Averell Harriman, both Carey allies, might be named chairman because of his legal problems, and Carey aides signed "Amen." Dashed Hopes. The behind-the-scenes role is apparently the best the Governor can achieve at the moment, with a continuing fiscal crisis in New York City and the state and a rebellious Legislature on his hands.

News of selecting a candidate for the United States Senate and prepare to serve as host to the Democratic National Convention. A spokesman said Mr. Carey would continue his appointment as state chairman at least until a report was issued by former Supreme Court Justice Jacob Grumet. Mr. Grumet is examining the validity of charges by the special state prosecutor, Maurice H. Nadjari, that the Governor was trying to head Cunningham when he sought to dismiss Mr. Nadjari.

Blurring the Lines. Mr. Cunningham's problems were one of the factors in the Governor's decision to decline to be a delegate to and chairman of the New York delegation to the convention—a traditional role for a Governor. Mr. Carey hopes, his aides said, to blur identification with Mr. Cunningham in case the Nadjari investigation leads to an indictment. They said he also hoped to avoid the squabbles that had already started in the New York delegation over delegates at large and would undoubtedly continue over various issues and candidates.

At least two members of the Carey inner circle suggested yesterday the possibility of a Carter-Carey ticket, noting that Mr. Carey—as a Northerner, a Roman Catholic, an expert by necessity on urban crises and a man who knew his way around Washington when he was a Congressman—would balance Mr. Carter, a Protestant and a politician with reputation as rural-oriented and anti-Washington.

Effects on Leadership. The effect on the Carey-Cunningham rupture has been to leave the Democratic Party in the state divided and leaderless. Joseph F. Crangle of Buffalo, the former Democratic state chairman who was ousted by Mr. Cunningham 18 months ago, appears to be establishing a counterforce to Mr. Carey and Mr. Cunningham.

Cunningham Inquiry in a New Phase

Continued From Page 1, Col. 2. can Bank and Trust Company. "It's not unusual for a new stage administration to change banks," Mr. O'Neill said by way of explaining the Commission's actions. Abraham Feinstein, a director of the American Bank and Trust Company, is reported to have been a major Democratic campaign contributor. Mayor Beane was the bank's finance chairman while he was not in the city's service.

Mr. Melton testified that Mr. Cunningham asked him if he would consider changing accounts to the Queens branch and to the Bronx branch of the American Bank and Trust Company. Mr. O'Neill also said that an inquiry was undertaken to transfer certain funds to the Queens branch, but that transfer was not feasible. Then Mr. Melton, who had volunteered to testify after signing a waiver giving up his immunity from any prosecution, testified that Mr. Cunningham asked him if he would consider changing an interest-free account amounting to $40,000 from the Queens branch to the American Bank and Trust Company branch at 301 East Broadway in the Bronx. "It was not a demand," Mr. Cunningham's party, Mr. O'Neill stressed. According to Mr. O'Neill, after Mr. Melton was appointed Commissioner—Mr. Levin, president of the American Bank and Trust Company, approving transfer of funds to the bank's Queens branch. Despite repeated requests, Mr. Levin could not be reached for comment last night.

While details of the grand jury's inquiry remained sketchy, the panel was apparently trying to determine what services Mr. Cunningham or his law firm provided for the approximately $50,000 he received from the bank over a two-year period.

According to other witnesses and officials, the grand jury is seeking to learn whether Mr. Cunningham sought to obtain the transfer of certain bank accounts from at least five other state agencies, including the Department of Taxation and Finance, which among other things oversees parimutuel-tax funds.

Investigators are apparently trying to discover what role, if any, Mr. Cunningham may have played in helping to obtain the transfer of certain state accounts to two other banks, one in Queens and the other in Rockland County. The names of the banks could not be obtained last night.

Several inquiries into interest-free account practices have been undertaken in the last few years, and the inquiry was renewed last January with the issuing of a report by the Assembly's Office of Oversight and Analysis. That report raised questions about why certain banks had been chosen to handle the lucrative business.

By one estimate there are 5,000 state checking accounts, ranging from small legislative committee accounts for staff travel allowances to the millions of dollars in agency accounts cited in the Assembly report.

Mr. O'Neill, the spokesman for Mr. Melton, the Motor Vehicle Commissioner, said the grand jury questioned Mr. Melton about the accounts.

At least two members of the Carey inner circle suggested yesterday the possibility of a Carter-Carey ticket, noting that Mr. Carey—as a Northerner, a Roman Catholic, an expert by necessity on urban crises and a man who knew his way around Washington when he was a Congressman—would balance Mr. Carter, a Protestant and a politician with reputation as rural-oriented and anti-Washington.

Ali Takes Decision and Retains Title, but Young Stuns Champion

DAVE ANDERSON
Special to The New York Times
LANDOVER, Md., April 30—Muhammad Ali, weighing 165 pounds, the heaviest of any professional boxer, opposed Jimmy Young of Philadelphia for the heavyweight boxing championship tonight before a stimated assembly of 10,000 spectators in a home-ebout at the Capital Center.

Young, in a long black satin robe, was the first to enter the ring and was greeted with polite applause. Several minutes later Ali appeared, prompting a roar, but the champion was unusually subdued as he strolled around in his long white satin robe with his red gloves over his face in a cover-up pose.

In the second, Ali rushed across the ring again with his gloves protecting his face, and mauled the challenger against the ropes while throwing a brief flurry of punches. Later he cuffed Young around the head, but quickly returned to his no-punch strategy while permitting punches to his belly.

In the fifth, Ali resumed stalking for a knockout, but Young's clinches frustrated the champion. The sixth was a rerun of the fifth, with Young ducking under Ali's right hands until the challenger was nailed with a long right to the face. But the champion was unable to follow up.

In the seventh, Young landed a left-right combination that stung Ali momentarily. Seen the champion had Young against the ropes but none of his punches appeared to have the challenger in trouble. Ali was winning most of the rounds, after permitting Young to earn the first two, but the champion was unimpressive.

Yanks, Hunter Beat Royals

By LEONARD KOPPELT
Special to The New York Times
KANSAS CITY, April 30—Catfish Hunter was trying to end a personal slump on two fronts tonight as he started for the New York Yankees against the Kansas City Royals.

The Yankees won, 5-3. Hunter had a 1-3 worst record, which included all the Yankee defeats this season. He also had a five-game losing streak against the Royals, consisting of a 3-2 loss in New York last week, three losses last season, and his last start against Kansas City in 1974, when he was still with the Oakland A's. Up to that time, however, he had a 14-3 career record against the Royals.

Jim Wohlford turned the Yankees back in the third. After singles by White and Chambliss, Lou Piniella hit one high and far to left but Wohlford grabbed it as he crashed into the fence and held the ball for the third out. But he couldn't do anything in the fifth, when Thurman Munson followed successive triples by Stanley and Rivers with his third home run of the year, putting the Yankees ahead, 4-2. A single by Chambliss finished Spittorff and brought Doug Bird to the mound, and Piniella hit his first pitch into a double play.

Smith Lessons of the Broomstick Derby

By STEVE CADY
Special to The New York Times
LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 30—During the post parade at state Downs, the track announcer introduced the field: One, Elocutionist, ridden by Catherine... The me was lost in a burst of cheering as Catherine, wearing dark blue T-shirt and shorts and sitting high in the like Braulio Baeza, galloped her broomstick horse around the course. "Number Two," the announcer "Cojak, ridden by Robin—" and again cheered her out. This was the 12th running of the Broomstick Derby at the Louisville Collegiate School, an event that foretells the result of the Kentucky Derby with a degree of accuracy that turns touts and handicappers pink with envy. Two or three years ago a janitor at the school said winners at Collegiate had repeated at Churchill Downs seven times in years, and since he was a horseplayer who did a little asking on the side, the chances are his memory was teacher who was here in 1964 recalls that Northern won both races that year, but official records kept until five years later. Starting in 1969, Majestic, Dust Commander and Canonero II brought off ed double three years in a row. Riva Ridge, the inner at the big track, was outrun at Collegiate but the following year Secretariat swept to victory events. Two years ago a broomstick named Hudson dropped down in front, and to almost everyone's ment his namesake finished second to Cannonade hill. Last year the Broomstick Derby turned out to Broomstick Preakness, for it was won by Master outh at Churchill Downs but first at Pimlico a later.

declared there would be two heats, each sending four survivors into the final. Ten jockeys astride their broomsticks lined up for the first heat. Each had been assigned the name of a Kentucky Derby starter and wore a paper pie plate for a hat with colored streamers in lieu of racing silks. With only nine expected to go to the post tomorrow, names like Honest Pleasure, Bold Forbes and Cojak had to be issued in duplicate.

In the first heat, a steed bolted on the clubhouse turn, going clear to the outside rail. He wasn't immediately identified, but his jockey wore a blue and white pinafore. One rider fell in the homestretch and had her tears wiped away by a teacher. In the post parade there had been good-natured boos for a jock named David Starling, but he won the heat with Cojak in a common gallop.

Honest Pleasure had the ninth and outside position in the second heat. On top of that, he dwelt at the start, but he still got up to qualify. The winner was Play the Red, under Donald Fitzpatrick.

Honest Pleasure at the Wire
Qualifiers lined up for the final and went away in a good start. A pint-sized Robyn Smith was on the lead, riding with her lower lip clamped between her teeth, but she swayed a bit in the going and couldn't carry her speed the Derby distance. Honest Pleasure moved boldly along the rail after turning for home, made the lead a few strides before the finish and then pulled himself up.

At least, that's how it looked from the pressbox. Later there was a report that the rider had misjudged the finish, just like Bill Shoemaker aboard Gallant Man in 1957. At any rate, Honest Pleasure was out of the money. The colt had been the favorite, too; the cheers greeting his introduction had left no doubt of that.

When Honest Pleasure faltered, who should charge to the front but good old David Starling on Cojak. Meredith Leathers was second on Inca Roca, with Bidson third under the guidance of Philip Daulton. Starling cantered Cojak back to the winner's circle, where Nancy Kussrow, the principal, hung a wreath of paper roses over the broomstick's withers.

In the pressbox, the experts compared notes. Cojak, they noted, was a Maryland-bred, Inca Roca was foaled in Florida and Bidson was bred and sold in Kentucky. Bold Forbes, the second favorite, never got a call.

These are the bare facts, reported without embellishment, pointing no moral. They are, nevertheless, historical facts, and Cojak is 30-1 in tomorrow's morning line.

Pressure For Merger Is Growing

By SAM GOLDAPER
Federal Judge Robert L. Carter kept the pressure on the National and American Basketball Associations yesterday to reach an out-of-court settlement of their lawsuit that could lead to a consolidation of the leagues.

Instead of granting the N.B.A. its requested postponement of the suit until September, Judge Carter directed both leagues to appear before him on June 18. The trial of the suit, in which the A.B.A. has charged the older league with trying to drive it out of business, was scheduled to start on June 1. Judge Carter informed the leagues that if no settlement was reached by then, he would postpone his vacation so that the trial could begin—probably on July 1.

The new hearing date will be one day after the N.B.A. owners complete their annual meeting at Hyannis, Mass. Presumably, it will be at these meetings that the N.B.A. owners would vote on the "definitive" offer Dave DeBusschere, the A.B.A. commissioner, gave to Larry O'Brien, his N.B.A. counterpart, last Tuesday for the consolidation of the leagues.

The A.B.A. offer emerged after Judge Carter had instructed both commissioners to hold talks on a settlement. After several meetings between the commissioners, they expanded the talks to

Nuggets, Nets Set For Final

By PAUL L. MONTGOMERY

Special to The New York Times DENVER, April 30—For both coaches in the American Basketball Association final, getting their teams ready means getting them loose.

"The worst thing for a team that has gotten this far is to harp on the importance of the games," said Larry Brown, the Denver coach, after he put the Nuggets through a good-natured workout this afternoon at the McNichols Sports Arena.

Kevin Loughery, the coach of the New York Nets, operates on the same principle. "I made a mistake last year at the end, putting so much emphasis on the mistakes we were making and the lead down we were having," he said.

Whether or not Metzger had considered continuing to play, he was not. How- ever Dick Stello, the first base manager, ruled that Metzger had gone as far as he reasonably could have advanced and made him stay at second.

Interference Claimed Bill Virdon, the Astro manager who had plotted his strategy from the other dug out the last two seasons as manager of the Yankees in exile, argued that Metzger should be given third base because of interference.

At the end, he divided the team into "the old guys" and "the young guys," like Towe and David Thompson, another rookie, and set up a shooting contest. The older players won repeatedly and easily.

Let's play a game where you have to think to win," Towe said in retaliation. The Nets announced a switch in playoff dates at the Nassau Coliseum. Officials said the fourth game would be played Saturday night, May 8, instead of Sunday, May 9.

Jackson, Unsigned, to Play for Orioles

By DEANE MCGOWEN

Reggie Jackson, who held out for four weeks while asking his new team, Baltimore, for a higher salary, agreed to join the Orioles last night.

The Orioles probably would have liked to have the former slugging star of Oakland available for this game because the A's opened the four-game series by hammering out an 11-1 victory.

Mike Torrez, who went from Baltimore to Oakland as part of the Jackson trade, held his former teammates at two hits in running his won-lost record to 3-3. Torrez did not give up a hit until there were two out in the sixth when Al Bumbry doubled down the first base line with two out. Ford stopped the Yankees' march on the eighth, allowing only one harmless hit in the sixth. Hunter, through seven innings, was working on a six-hitter but struggling.

Then the Yankees fashioned an important extra run in the ninth. Willie Randolph singled with one out, stole second and stole third as Stanley fanned. Rivers, with two strikes, lined a single to right, making it 5-3. He stole second, too, provoking an irrational pass to White, but Munson bounced into a force at third.

Share Golf Lead With 67's

By JOHN S. RADOSTA

HOUSTON, April 30—The Houston open, dedicated in equal parts to the institutions of Texas golf and Texas real estate, got off to a soggy start today, delayed a day by a heavy rain that had left the Woodlands Country Club course in unplayable condition.

In a development that has been rather common this season, the first-round leaders were relatively unknown, the spear carriers of the pro golf tour. Today's crop at 67, five under par, consisted of Bill Rogers, Wally Armstrong, Mark Hayes and Forrest (Fuzzy) Fezler.

Rogers and Armstrong were among the Cinderellas who were near the top half-way through last week's New Orleans open. Rogers went on to tie for 17th and Armstrong for 48th.

Under an all-day overcast and with rain-softened greens holding most approach shots, scores in the field of 156 were on the low side.

Slightly more than one-half the field shot par or better—55 players turned in subpar scores, and 24 others were at even par.

George Burns, a Long Islander in his first full year on the pro tour, shot a 68.

Well-known Players Return

Bruce Devlin, the Australian pro who has given up full-time competition to devote to his business of building golf courses, shot a 69. There he was tied with, among others, Kermit Ziegl, the runner-up in the Florida Citrus open last month. Lee Trevino led an even larger cluster at 70.

Among the bigger-name players, Johnny Miller was in with 73, one over par. Hubert Green, winner of three straight tournaments in March, shot 69. Behind Trevino's 70 there were Arnold Palmer at 71 and Ben Crenshaw at 74. Dave Hill was running as low as four under par after the first six holes, but he finished with 69.

The field for this tournament is unusually large—156, which is 12 more than the customary size of a Professional Golfers' Association event. For sentimentalists, the entries include such old-timers as Doug Sanders (deceased in orange today); Jackie Burke, Jack Fleck and the brothers Hebert, Lionel and Jay.

The tournament is being played, for the second year, on a land-development project named The Woodlands, which is gigantic enough to fit the Texas stereotype of Big. The multi-billion-dollar Woodlands, 25 miles from downtown Houston, touts itself as a "new hometown."

Rogers started badly with a bogey 5 on the second hole, where he took three putts from 60 feet. But then, as he told it, his putter "got hot all of a sudden" and he started making putts for birdies.

Curiously, his birdies came in pairs—on 9 and 10, 12 and 13 and 17 and 18. His hot putter dropped putts ranging from six to 30 feet.

Slow Pace Hurts Rogers

Rogers still shows the scars of two near misses. At the Heritage in March he was two shots out of the lead after 38 holes but he blew his chances with an 80 and a 74 in the next two rounds. He did something of the same sort last week in New Orleans. One thing he learned, he said, was that he was hurting himself by trying to slow down his normally fast pace.

Fezler, the runner-up in the 1974 United States Open, carded five birdies in a row, from the third through the seventh holes. He is active on the tour again after surgery on the tendons of his left wrist last December.

Armstrong said he was also having some wrist trouble, the result of an injury last week in the New Orleans Open.

Hayes, who tied for second in this year's Dorset-Eastern open, had eight birdies, but "quit thinking on some holes," he said and it cost him three bogeys. After carding four consecutive birdies from 13 through 16, he said he got "excited and jittery," and that caused him to bogey Nos. 17 and 18.

Mystery in Peking

The explosion at the gates of the Soviet Embassy in Peking is being denounced as counterrevolutionary sabotage by Chinese authorities. But why should dissident Chinese forces feel it necessary to stage such a demonstration?

The official Peking line is that of implacable hostility toward Moscow, and Prime Minister Hua Kuo-feng recently referred to the Soviet Union as a "wicked and ruthless superpower." One would expect genuine Chinese counterrevolutionaries to be pro-Soviet, as in Albania—where Communist Party boss Enver Hoxha has just announced the crushing of a dissident faction allegedly seeking to break Tirana's ties with Peking and to move closer to Moscow.

Such considerations suggest a somewhat different explanation for the explosion in Peking. Could it be that a factional battle in the Chinese leadership rages over the issue of whether or not to improve relations with Moscow, and that the anti-Soviet faction was sufficiently alarmed by the strength of its opponents to conclude that an act of violence against the Soviet Embassy might be useful to halt progress toward better Soviet-Chinese relations?

Such a hypothesis cannot be proved, but there are some interesting indications. Last December Peking unexpectedly released members of a Soviet helicopter crew who had been kept prisoner for nearly 21 months; on their return Moscow made no effort to use the incident for anti-Chinese propaganda. Last month China suddenly agreed to exchange ambassadors with India, one of Moscow's closest friends in Asia. Also last month a lengthy semi-official analysis in Pravda of Soviet-Chinese relations proposed that the Chinese return to the bilateral border talks that began in October 1969, and that have been in recess since last May. Several days ago a group of Congressmen returned from Peking with the news that the Chinese are "emphatically not interested" in formal defense agreements with this country or in purchasing American arms.

What should not be forgotten is that it was Chou En-lai personally who brought the Soviet-Chinese differences into the open in 1961 in Moscow when he defended Albania publicly against Khrushchev's attacks and demonstratively left Moscow before the Communist Party Congress he was attending had adjourned. Recurrently thereafter, the late Prime Minister was seen by Moscow as the key figure in the anti-Soviet leadership of China, especially when Chou and Secretary Kissinger broke the ice between Peking and Washington in 1971.

The clues suggesting an easing of Moscow-Peking tension have all emerged in the last four months, beginning at a time when Chou was on his death bed, and continuing since his death last January.

Threadneedle St. Gang

The Bank of England—the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street that is the very core of British probity and financial integrity—is reportedly investigating its staff to find out whether any members have been involved in bribery, forgery, currency smuggling and illegal foreign securities dealing. The suspicion may prove baseless, but, if it does not, Tories will rush to blame the decay of morality on loose budgets, bloated social services, greedy trade unions, rapidly growing money supplies and the sinking pound—while Socialists will blame the decadence of Capitalism and the Old Establishment. We hope both are wrong. Say it ain't so, Governor.

Small Reform of the Fed

Representative Henry S. Reuss's bold effort to overhaul the Federal Reserve System in order to make it more responsive to elected political authority—both in the Administration and in Congress—has been almost completely undermined. The bill that Mr. Reuss, chairman of the House Banking Committee, introduced early this year was passed by the committee this week in a form that will effect only the most modest changes in the structure and functions of the Fed.

One change adopted would make the terms of chairman and vice chairman of the Fed coincident with that of the President. This increases the likelihood that any future President would have a Fed chairman with whose over-all monetary policy he feels in accord and with whom he is personally comfortable. But instances of conflict between Presidents and Fed chairmen have been rare; and when they have occurred, they should not necessarily have been resolved in the President's favor. In 1972, for example, President Nixon sought to bring heavy pressure on Chairman Burns—his own appointee at the Fed—to silence his campaign for an incomes policy to arrest inflationary wage-and-price increases. Shortly afterward, ironically enough, Mr. Nixon launched his New Economic Policy, complete with wage and price controls.

The balance point between an overly politicized Fed and an excessively independent Fed is hard to find. Mr. Reuss's original bill called for the President to appoint the twelve regional Federal Reserve Bank presidents, subject to Senate confirmation, rather than have them chosen, as now, by the banks' own boards of directors. This could well have created a basket of political "plums," as Dr. Burns put it, unwisely increasing the President's control of the monetary system.

However, there is now excessive private banker dominance of the regional bank boards. The bill takes a modest but sensible step toward correcting too narrow a focus by expanding the regional bank boards from nine to twelve members and calling for their selection with "due consideration" to the interests of labor, education, agriculture, conservation and consumers.

Chairman Burns forcefully—and successfully—opposed a provision that would have required him to make quarterly forecasts of monetary policy a year ahead and to state the expected effects on employment, production and prices. He argued that such forecasts were bound to be inaccurate and might adversely affect business and consumer attitudes.

Nevertheless, Mr. Reuss's effort to require the Fed to make known its employment, production and price objectives—and not just short-term targets for the money supply—was on the right track. Congress should press the monetary authorities to pursue national policy objectives in its periodic reviews of Federal Reserve policy. The use of monetary policy to achieve high employment and price stability is the proper and legal responsibility of Congress and not the sole prerogative of the Fed.

What Might Have Been

When political historians take the long look at this year's Presidential campaign, they may well conclude that Congressional fumbling of the campaign finance law played a major role in the result.

The Supreme Court decided at the end of January that the Federal Election Commission had been unconstitutionally selected. To avoid chaos in a campaign already under way, it gave Congress until March 23 to reconstitute that body so that it could legally continue to issue Federal funds to the qualified candidates in the field. Congress decided, while it was about it, to patch up the entire law—some of its members genuinely bent on reform, others as genuinely bent on political advantage and all too few concerned with either the dangers of delay or the impropriety of changing rules in the middle of a race.

Only now, five weeks after the deadline, has a conference committee of the two houses reached agreement on a revised law—which still has to be approved by each chamber and then signed by a reluctant President. Meanwhile, the commission's inability to pay out Federal funds, which the candidates had a right to count on, virtually emptied the campaign chests of Senator Jackson and Representative Udall, leaving them without the resources to stand up to the better-financed Governor Carter in the vitally important Pennsylvania campaign.

It is possible, even likely, that Mr. Carter would have won that primary, last Tuesday, in any case—but it is most unlikely that without that financial advantage he would have won it by the overwhelming margin that he did. While he flew a chartered plane around the state, Senator Jackson had to rely on scheduled flights and endless car trips—and Representative Udall could hardly afford even the telephones that he needed.

It was not the fact of Mr. Carter's victory but its magnitude that just about eliminated his opponents from the race. At the same time, their virtual elimination served to discourage the one off-stage figure who might in the end have headed off the Georgian. Before Pennsylvania, it was touch-and-go as to whether Senator Hubert Humphrey would make himself a candidate by entering the New Jersey primary. If he was of two minds before the Pennsylvania primary, there is no doubt that the dimensions of the Carter triumph in that state dictated which mind he would follow.

It will be one of the great ironies of politics if the Minnesota reformer turns out in fact to have been unintentionally deprived of his best chance at the nomination by some of his friends in Congress in the name of campaign reform.

The Board Says 'No'

Following the lead of Governor Carey and backed by a legal opinion from Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz, the Emergency Financial Control Board has formally rejected the transit pact.

The board had no alternative. The pact with its cost-of-living increase that was only vaguely tied to promised productivity gains was clearly in violation of the state-mandated wage freeze. It posed an unacceptable threat to the city's three-year fiscal plan which the board is required to uphold.

It is now up to the Transit Authority and the Transport Workers Union to renegotiate an agreement which meets the conditions set forth by the law and the plan, a task that should require no further intervention by the Control Board. The board's job is to continue to say "no" to any labor or other agreement or proposal that fails the test of fiscal responsibility.

Contracting In

The Beame administration's plan to establish profit-motivated garbage-collecting cooperatives in two sanitation districts represents a boldly innovative attempt to improve the productivity of a shrinking, and notoriously unproductive, municipal work-force.

Sanitation producer cooperatives were first suggested last fall by the city's new Productivity Council, which described the plan as the "most radical" of a long list of recommendations. "This is a highly experimental proposal," the council said, "which calls for a sanitation worker to buy into a co-op . . . and entitles him to a job and some degree of control over that job."

Only time and experience can tell whether the new cooperatives will be able to attract necessary management skills and generate efficiencies sufficient to produce a bonus for both the workers and the city. Certainly contracts with the new producer groups will have to be carefully drawn and closely monitored to insure that the cooperatives do not become just another device for ripping off the taxpayer.

If the cooperatives prove successful, however, contracting "in" to employee groups could provide an attractive alternative to competing proposals for contracting "out" to private carters, a system that would deny jobs to municipal workers and could expose the city to extortion by organized crime. This experiment and a similar program planned by the Parks Department are worth trying.

Middle Class: The Key to City Survival

The Times recently reported that blacks and Puerto Ricans now form a majority in the Bronx and that there is a continuing "white flight" from the city. Manhattan also experienced a net decline in black population of nearly 90,000 from 1970 to 1975.

"White flight" should really be restated as "middle-class flight." The city is becoming increasingly unattractive for middle-class families, whether they are white or black. Schools have deteriorated substantially. Most of them have become such hotbeds of violence, crime, drugs and unfavorable learning situations so that no middle-class family wishes to subject its children to them. Middle-class housing at affordable rates in neighborhoods that have not totally deteriorated is difficult, if not impossible, to find.

The city suffers from failure to pick up garbage, insufficient police and fire protection, streets and roadways that are totally unrepaired, parks that are either not taken care of or unsafe, or both. Consequently, there is very little reason for middle-class families to remain. Although the city still maintains its cultural attractions, one does not have to endure living in it to enjoy them.

The city cannot hope to revive economically by encouraging more and more middle-class people to depart. Non-working and non-tax-paying people cannot be the basis for a return of the city's economy to viability. Unless neighborhoods and schools are maintained and improved and new jobs are created, middle-class families will continue to flee New York.

A conscious effort should be made to encourage the middle class to remain. The city must spend more of its funds to retain those of the middle class still in the city. Spending too large a portion of city funds on a variety of social programs, even if desirable and well administered, which do not benefit the middle class will encourage the non-middle class to stay in the city and to come here from other areas, and the middle class to leave. City government does not have the funds to supply every conceivable social service.

If middle-class departure continues unabated, it is unlikely that the city will ever be able to balance its budget or to provide needed social services because there will be too few taxpayers, and no one else, either at the state or at the Federal level, seems interested in paying.

The Health Opportunity

The recently announced flu vaccination program indicates that the nation's health establishment can, when it wants to, take swift and substantial steps to prevent disease. This vaccination program offers a unique opportunity to inform the public about other health matters, because virtually the entire American population will be in contact with a health professional. The Federal Government, which has already committed $135 million for the program, should seize the opportunity to piggy-back other health measures onto the flu program.

The Government could invest a little more money and expand the one-shot flu program into a major health offensive. I suggest that everyone who gets a flu shot should also have his or her blood pressure and cholesterol levels measured and should be given a simple, attractive pamphlet on how to choose a low-fat, low-sugar diet that will help prevent tooth decay, heart disease, bowel cancer and other diet-related health problems. These preventive measures could help extend millions of lives and save billions of dollars in medical expenses.

Save the Postal Service

If you appreciate the enormous importance of maintaining our Postal Service as is, all this discussion of reducing the six-day service and eliminating small post offices is scary. You'd think we were debating alternate-side-of-the-street parking regulations. America depends on the Postal Service, and by this I mean six-day service, as the real basis of its communications network. After all, the daily business correspondence that makes radio, television and print media function at all arrives mostly by mail. In thousands of small towns, the post office may be that town's only real link with the rest of us. And, interestingly enough, the smaller the town, the more important the post office.

If Sally in Montana can't let Aunt Nellie in North Carolina know about the new baby in three days for 13 cents by U.S. mail, our greatness as a unified, family-centered nation will be greatly diminished. The Postal Service should remain as a service of the people, and not become another pathetic nationalized business trying to function with a fat bottom line. It is imperative that we make the P.O. service work as a nonprofit operation unless future generations are to lay the blame on us for letting another good part of America slip away.

Homosexuality: Thoughts on a Ruling

Did the United States Supreme Court really decide on March 29 that a state may constitutionally make criminal the sexual acts of consenting adults in private? That is what the Court watchers and most of the commentators think, but "it ain't necessarily so."

On March 29, the Supreme Court affirmed by a vote of 6 to 3, with neither the majority nor the dissenters writing opinions, the judgment of the three-judge Federal Court which had held that such behavior could be made the subject of criminal penalties. However, when the United States Supreme Court affirms a judgment, it does not necessarily agree with the opinion that led to that judgment. Thus the Supreme Court could have affirmed the judgment in the case in question on grounds other than those stated by the court below.

The judgment of the court below was to dismiss the complaint, which had asked for a declaratory judgment and an injunction against the enforcement of the Virginia statute dealing with homosexuality. There are many grounds on which the United States Supreme Court could have affirmed that judgment even though it may not agree with the lower court, which said that states can constitutionally make criminal the sexual acts of consenting adults in private. For the Supreme Court has increasingly of late evidenced a dissatisfaction with the practice of plaintiffs bringing actions in Federal three-judge courts to establish the unconstitutionality of state statutes as was done here. In such cases the Court has not infrequently found against the plaintiffs on technical grounds which have nothing to do with the merits of the statutes. These procedural and/or jurisdictional grounds do not bear on the constitutional questions presented but rather on such questions as in what circumstances, by whom and for what relief the action is brought in the Federal Court.

When the United States Supreme Court affirmed the lower court's judgment in this case, therefore, it may well have done so on one or more of these technical procedural or jurisdictional grounds. If that is the situation, the Supreme Court has not decided that states may constitutionally penalize the sexual acts of consenting adults in private. A number of lower courts have already held that it is indeed a violation of the constitutional right of privacy for government to make such acts criminal. In due course, if the Supreme Court is presented with this question in a manner it finds procedurally and jurisdictionally acceptable, it may and should take the same position it has taken in other sex-related contexts: that there are zones of privacy into which our Big Brother, the government, may not intrude.

Letters to the Editor

Of Fiscal Discipline To the Editor:

Today, discipline is a dirty word just about every area of life it be in the home as it is in the world of business, in government at all levels the military services.

Gold at fixed prices as of value has exercised a discipline over both economic and social life. The Bretton Woods, which maintained current for a long period of time as a backlog for the exchange international currencies. In the new I.M.F. floating leaves international currencies little more than political that have intrinsic value, little more than the paper printed on.

Perhaps Germany after I provides the best example quickly confidence can be in a currency. In 1921 a mark was exchanged for four G marks. Only one year later for my lunch in Berlin, a year the exchange rate had over one billion paper marks dollar. As a result of the many had no gold left in a floating currency.

Continuing Government Great Britain have paid mounting costs of social which in turn has led to a situation in the purchasing power, both at home and it is interesting to note that it is now giving lip fiscal responsibility, a 180 for them.

This is a Presidential election the liberals in both part to urge us to follow the path of the British Labor; apparent recognition that have been obliged to learn the votes are counted in reckless and undisciplined and fiscal policies. At people see our chickens to roost (New York province example) Discipline it doesn't, New York is the precursor of dire for ours and other nations.

Non-Panamanian

To the Editor:

In the much-discussed renegotiation of the Panama Canal, the issue is presented as if the Panamanians asserting a natural right to Zone against the imperial States. It is less fashionable out that the Republic of Panama has no legal or moral claim to Zone, which it never owned.

When the United States the canal rights of the Fr Company in 1903, it found which then owned all unwilling to come to terms building of a canal. Rather than the matter, we Panamanians to revolt against warship, which effectively the Colombians from suppression of the Pan Treaty.

It is perfectly true that 1921, Colombia by treaty rights to the Canal Zone Panama will not abide by why should Colombia? It is that if we stand on treaties should remain in America under the present agreement discard them, the Canal Zone be returned to Colombia.

Somalia: 'A Fabri

To the Editor:

I refer to the grossly misleading article, quoting sources, that appeared in A titled "Cubans Reported in Area."

The story that there are Cuban military forces is a fabrication which I categorically deny. There is no Cuban military person in Somalia there is no need for having military presence there.

Somalia is a peace-loving would like to live in peace neighbors and is determined differences by peaceful means stated on many occasions by Mohamed Siyad Barre contrasted by the Somali Government's peace-seeking policy of the several years.

The people and Government Somalia are deeply involved enormous task of economic development. Maximum effort made to direct available human material resources to that Somalia, therefore, is not for military adventures and certainly not need foreign troops to territory.

The sources of your article gave false information but to spread nefarious propaganda Somalia in order to mislead opinion. The purpose of this to tell the truth on the matter interest of your readers and once and for all this di-campaign.

Everybody Said, 'Amen.'

By Russell Baker

The sinners took their places on the pews and when they were all seated, the new leader spoke.

"I love you all," he said.

"Amen," said Mayor Daley.

"Because you are all good people," said.

"Amen," said all the Democrats in town.

"And I not only love all of you. I love everybody who doesn't even long to the Democratic Party."

There was a silence from the pews.

"I love the Republicans, too," he said.

The silence intensified.

The leader looked down at George Beane. "Say amen, George," he said.

George said, "Amen."

"Everybody say amen," said the leader.

Everybody said, "Amen."

"And the reason I love everybody, in the independents and Republicans, is because they are all Americans. And Americans are all good people."

"Amen," said the sinners.

"Did you say amen, Sister Hicks?" asked Louise Day Hicks.

"I don't want to say amen to loving school busers," she murmured.

"If you don't love the school busers, Sister Hicks," said the leader, "I don't want you to lie about it. I'll never tell a lie, and I don't want you to ever lie. We Democrats are going to change our old ways. We Democrats are going to win the White House."

"Hallelujah!" shouted all the sinners, clapping their feet and tossing their hats.

"And when we get to the White House there is something else we are going to do."

"A little Federal gravy to New York," shouted Mayor Beane.

"Sit down and say amen, Brother Beane, and reflect on the sinfulness of your greed," said the leader.

Brother Beane sat down and said, "Amen."

"Brother Beane is a good person," said the leader, "and I love him, and I

OBSERVER

I never lie to him. One of the ways we are going to change is the old way too much big government with too much Federal gravy."

The silence was intense.

Everybody say Amen," commanded the leader.

The silence became sullen.

Everybody who wants the Democrats to win the White House say Amen," commanded the leader.

Everybody said, "Amen."

And something else that's going to change—there's going to be no more sin in the Democratic Party."

"Amen," said several Democrats.

Brother Kennedy," said the leader.

Yes, amen."

"Amen," said Senator Kennedy.

Say amen, Brother Cunningham," said the leader.

"Amen," said Patrick J. Cunningham.

Robert Humphrey spoke up. "Why don't you make Governor Brown say Amen," he asked.

"I will never tell you a lie, Brother Humphrey," said the leader. "The reason I do not make Brother Brown say Amen is because Brother Brown is into Oriental philosophy this morning when he is in that state he does say amen. He chants his mantra, 'Om, Om, Om.' Chant 'Om,' Brother Humphrey."

Brother Brown chanted, "Om, Om, Om."

"I would like to see there any other question," asked the leader.

Robert Humphrey stood up. "I'd like to see if, in future meetings of the congregation," interrupted the leader.

"In future meetings of the congregation, you intend to continue doing the talking while the rest of us sit there saying amen?"

"I would like to see there any other question," asked the leader. "All I would like to see is that the White House listen to Brother Humphrey, say amen."

Robert Humphrey cried the congregation, and was purified by dreams of bigger contracts ahead in that Paradise.

With Liberty and... uh... uh... uh

Following is a speech, adapted by The New York Times, that Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, was scheduled to deliver today, Law Day, before the Genesee County and Oakland County Bar Associations in Michigan.

By Leonard Woodcock

Law Day, U.S.A., is a serious and, in some ways, awesome celebration. I salute the goals of Law Day: To advance equality and justice under law; to promote citizen support of law observance and enforcement; to foster respect for law.

The theme of Law Day 1976—"200 Years of Liberty and Law"—is, however, another story altogether.

"Two hundred years of Liberty and Law?"

Ask black Americans, after a hundred years of slavery. Ask native American Indians, living today with broken promises and poverty. Ask the Japanese-Americans who were shipped to Government "camps" in World War II. Ask the victims of the 1919-20 Palmer raids. Ask the targets of McCarthyism. Ask the early union organizers who lived with fear and the denial of basic rights. Ask the Latinos and their children who have worked in the "harvest of shame."

The 200 years of liberty and law have been only for some Americans.

Recent events, too, give pause to the slogan.

The Watergate misdeeds are already too well-known. The final cap was the pardon before trial of a former President charged with massive violations of the Constitution and the law. And think how close we came to having a G. Harrold Carswell on the Supreme Court.

The shock waves still come. The Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Central Intelligence Agency and the National Security Agency under several Administrations acted unconstitutionally and unlawfully.

The C.I.A. compiled 7,200 personal files, 1,000 files on organizations, and indexed the names of over 300,000 Americans. Army intelligence amassed over 100,000 files on civilians. The Internal Revenue Service maintained 5,585 political and tax files on individuals and 2,873 files on activist organizations.

Then there were the C.I.A.-F.B.I. mail openings and the F.B.I.'s Cointelpro and "black-bag" jobs.

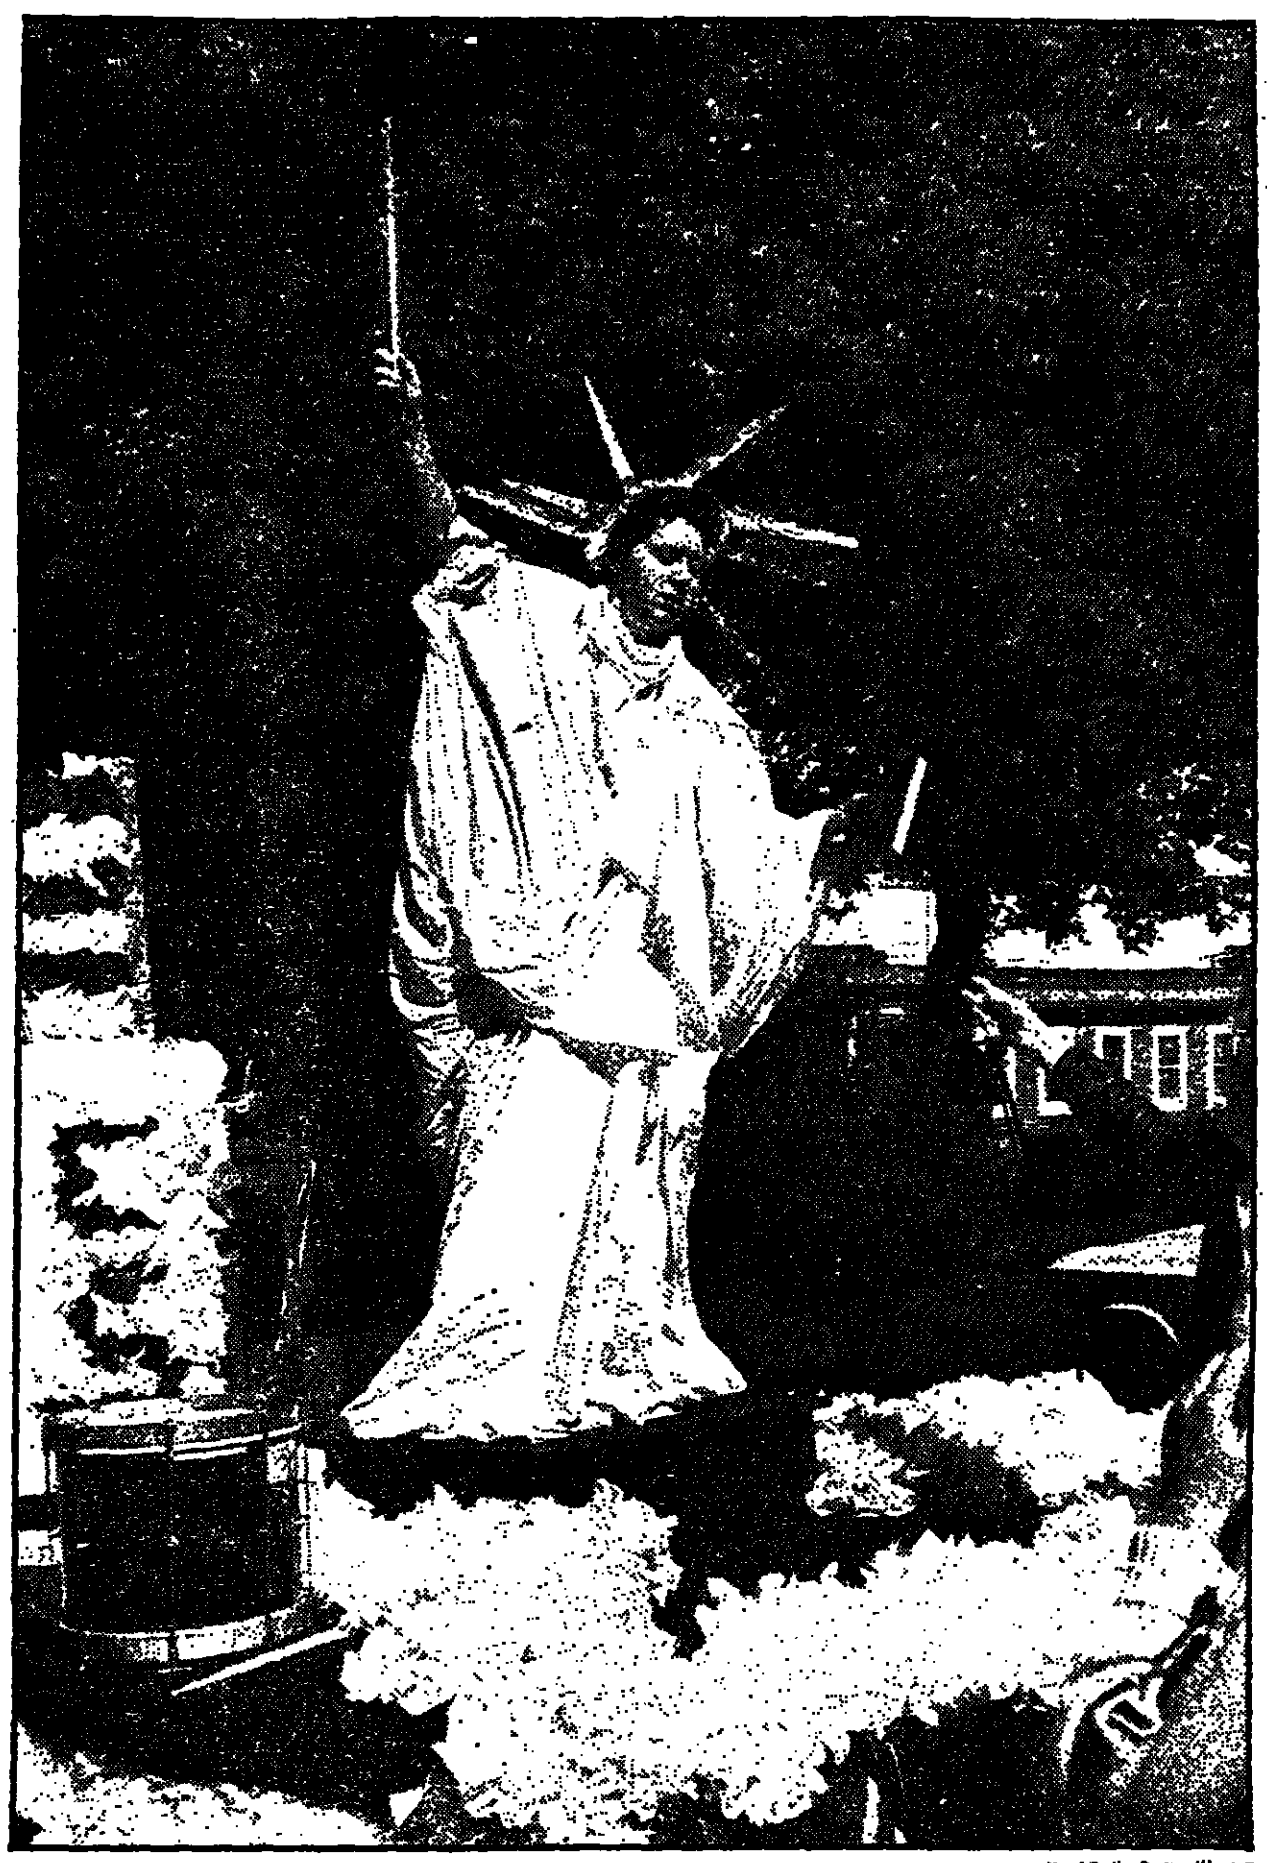

The crimes of government itself are the worst. Official injustice—injustice in the name of justice—can destroy a free society. Lawlessness called law and order, is totalitarianism.

The private sector has not done well either. About forty of America's largest corporations stand accused of payoffs overseas. Lockheed is the all-time champ, and Gulf, apparently not content with corrupting the American political process, admits to huge foreign payoffs. Probes continue.

Unscrupulous employers laugh at Federal labor law and its ineffective remedies. They view labor law apparently not unlike the Lockheeds and Gulfs view other laws.

And, sad to say, some union leaders have betrayed their trust and lost the right to claim legitimacy.

Penalties must fit crimes, but that certainly is not enough. A government of law requires the will to live under fair law. Tax loopholes must be closed to promote equity in law. The Government itself must obey the law. White and blue-collar criminals must be treated the same. The poor and the middle class must have truly equal access to the courts. There must be one law for every section of the country.

Judge Learned Hand said: "I often wonder whether we do not rest our hopes too much upon constitutions, upon laws, and upon courts; these are false hopes; believe me, these are false hopes. Liberty lies in the hearts of men and women; when it dies there, no constitution, no law, no court can save it."

Yes, we need a moral compass. We can expect citizen support of law observance and enforcement when we are able to keep that essential compact of fairness, equity and honor.

We have pledged to operate under a system of laws, not men, in which all are equal. It is time to live up to that pledge.

Consider the reply of an ancient Greek philosopher to the question, "When shall we achieve justice in Athens?" He said, "We shall achieve justice in Athens when those who are not injured are as indignant as those who are."

If we take that advice, we can do wonderful things.

It has been only 750 years since the barons forced the Magna Carta on King John. No greater testaments of freedom exist than the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Emancipation Proclamation. The building blocks are at hand.

We can build a monument to liberty and law. America is a pluralistic, multiracial, multifaceted society. We are urban and rural; old and young; black, brown, yellow and white; workers and managers; men and women. We speak in many tongues. Nevertheless, diverse as we are, we are one nation—one people. Equality guarantees justice.

Justice is not alone the province of lawyers, policemen and judges. Government leaders, teachers, clergymen, business and labor leaders—all have a role in justice. By observance of law, by living justly, we teach the highest ideals of the society.

When each of us insists on justice for the other we will achieve the just society.

Intelligence, Morality and Foreign Policy

By Sidney Hook

STANFORD, Calif.—From de Toqueville to Walter Lippmann, democracies have been faulted for their inability to conduct timely and intelligent foreign policies. Nonetheless, it is apparent that in the long run no foreign policy in a democracy can be successful unless it has popular support.

A more serious criticism contends that the likelihood of a successful democratic foreign policy is hindered by its tendency to be naively moralistic. It assumes that what is right or wrong, honorable or dishonorable, in ordinary private life is no less so in the life of nations at peace or war.

Many experts in foreign policy assure us that standards of morality in private and public life are profoundly different. The Italian statesman Cavour, not the worst of the great utilitarians, uttered a sentiment most would have approved: "If we did for ourselves what we did for our country what scandals we would be."

Our own onetime Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, in an address to those contemplating a career in foreign service, observed: "Generally speaking, morality often imposes upon those who exercise the powers of government standards of conduct quite different from what might seem right to them as private citizens."

Although this is a plausible and widely held view, it seems to me mistaken. It rests on a confusion between moral standards or basic moral values that, if valid, are invariant for all situations in which human beings must act, and the decisions that must be made in specific situations, whether personal or public.

No one moral standard or value by itself determines what action should be taken because when we are in an agony of doubt about what we should do, more than one moral principle or value always applies. Otherwise, we would have no genuine problem or doubt.

This holds in the area of personal relations as in public policy. Because we should tell the truth it does not follow that we should tell the truth to someone intent upon robbing or maiming innocent victims, if not telling the truth will tend to prevent such action.

There are always other values involved. Even in less extreme situations, we may rightly prefer to be kind rather than needlessly truthful if speaking the truth — say, about his stupidity or her ugliness—will result in great cruelty and no benefit to anyone else. It is wrong to steal, but we cannot morally condemn a man who steals to provide for his hungry family if no other means exist to alleviate their plight.

It should be clear that every troubled situation of moral choice is one in which the choice is not between good or bad, right or wrong, but between good and good, right and right, the good and the right. One good may be overridden by a greater good; one obligation by a more pressing one.

Ordinary human life would be impossible if we did not recognize and act on these considerations. Sometimes it involves a choice of evils. It is wrong to kill a human being, but if the only way to prevent him from blowing up a plane or city was by killing him, it would be right to do so.

To be sure, the weight of experience is behind the moral injunctions and ideals expressed in the testaments and commandments of the great religious and ethical systems of the past. But they cannot all be categorical in all situations because they obviously conflict.

Sometimes we cannot be just without being cruel. Reflection is required to determine which is to be subordinate to which. The only absolute is, in John Erskine's phrase, echoing a thought of John Dewey, "the moral obligation to be intelligent" in the choice of that course of conduct among possible alternatives whose consequences will strengthen the structure of the reflective values that define our philosophy of life.

The situation is quite familiar in the area of civil and political rights. The right to know may conflict with the right to privacy, freedom to publish with the right to a fair trial, freedom to speak (inciting a lynch mob) with the right to life. Even the right to worship God according to one's conscience may be bridged if it involves human sacrifice or polygamy. The conflict of freedoms should be resolved by the action whose consequences are more likely than those of any other to further the total structure of freedoms in the democratic community.

It is when we approach foreign policy that we find great impatience with considerations about moral principles. Palmerston's pronouncement is often cited: "We have no eternal allies or enemies. Our interests are eternal and perpetual, and those interests it is our duty to follow." Agreed. But why should the national interest exclude moral ideals?

Whatever its complexities, it presupposes at the very least national survival. Even on the plane of personal morality, survival, except under extreme conditions, is integral to the good life. In order to be blessed, says Spinoza, one must at least be.

We are not talking about national survival under any circumstances but of our survival as a free and open society, imperfect as it is. If its existence is desirable, to what measures are we committed in its defense in an age where nuclear Pearl Harbors make the sudden death of cultures possible? Certainly not to just any measures regardless of their consequences on basic security and to the character of the society we seek to defend. And just as certainly to an intelligent "intelligence system" that will penetrate the designs of the declared enemies of our society, especially violations of arms agreements. Secrecy on these and related measures is a matter of political morality.

There is no substitute in our time for an intelligence service ultimately responsible to the authorized representatives, political or judicial, of the democratic community.

Firefighters tell us it is sometimes necessary to burn a house, or permit it to burn, to save a village. This does not bestow a license for arson on fools or fanatics. We must recognize the evil we do even if it is the lesser evil. But if it is truly the lesser evil, then those who condemn it, or who would have us do nothing at all, are morally responsible for the greater evil.

Merry Thoughts For May

By C. L. Sulzberger

PARIS—May Day has been widely observed since pre-Christian times, starting as a pagan celebration of spring sowing and eventually gaining acceptance simply as an occasion of happiness and dancing around bedecked May poles. Only in 1889 was it internationally designated by a Socialist congress as an occasion to honor labor.

As Communism gained strength around the world it has been also used increasingly to honor left-wing political movements. But by now the old Marxist parties that invigorated May 1 demonstrations have been outflanked from the left by new extreme groups which call themselves "Maoist" or "Trotskyist" but are nearer to the 19th-century romantic revolutionaries that Turgenev dubbed "nihilists."

These minority factions, individually small in size, have varying objectives. Yet all believe in violence as a form of political expression and also that conventional Marxist parties are now rather stodgily conventional. For them May Day is a relatively bourgeois affair.

There are two contemporary types of political terrorism. The first seeks a specific national goal like the conquest of Ulster by the Irish Republican Army (I.R.A.) "Provos" or the Palestine Liberation Organization's hope to carve out a Palestine Arab state and, perhaps, eventually destroy Israel. The second is typified by West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang which wants to revolutionize German society.

For such groups no public manifestations like May Day parades are suitable. The movements are too small to muster visible support. Instead, they recognize dependence on terrorism as a weapon of the weak that is capable of drawing world attention to their cause. Thus one man's "terrorist" is another man's "freedom fighter."

This is now inferentially recognized by the diplomatic conference of the International Committee of the Red Cross, now meeting in its third session at Geneva. Delegates from 126 countries and from 14 national liberation movements are attending and discussing a possible accord granting prisoner-of-war status to "organized resistance movements" and even considering what if any reprisals are permissible.

Such approaches strongly contrast with the tough anti-terrorist tactics advocated by such governments as Israel and West Germany. While still Defense Minister, Gen. Moshe Dayan said grimly that no terrorist would be allowed to leave Israel alive. Israel takes a hard line against being blackmailed because hostages are taken—possibly forgetting its own "terrorist-or-freedom-fighters" who fought against Britain.

Likewise, Bonn's Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, whose Government has equipped a special anti-terrorist force called Grenzschutzgruppe Neun, has said: "They must be shown that there is a will that is stronger than theirs." These ideas obviously run counter to some suggestions heard in Geneva.

What is generally called "terrorism" has become a common international phenomenon: Moluccans, seeking independence from Indonesia by violence abroad; Irishmen planting bombs in England; Chadians holding a Frenchwoman for ransom; the far-left Italian Poderi Operai; various Arab groups working often against each other and always against Israel.

To an increasing degree terrorist movements find it easier to carry on operations in cities rather than by traditional rural guerrilla warfare. Their usual textbook is the "Manual of the Urban Guerrilla" by the Brazilian revolutionist, Carlos Marighella.

Marighella urges killing policemen, expropriating wealth, and adds: "We are in full revolutionary war and the war can be waged only by violent means." And terrorists, who have already shown how they can use the openness of democratic society to protect themselves, may someday use the terrible developments of modern weaponry to exploit their cause.

During United States Congressional hearings about poisons stocked by the Pentagon for possible wartime use, an old theoretical paper was discovered. This pointed out how easy it would be for a few people to ride through the New York subway system dropping off toxic materials and ultimately destroying the city.

Moreover, it is now acknowledged as conceivable that terrorists could hijack a nuclear warhead and use it for blackmail or destruction. It is not even beyond the bounds of belief that urban guerrillas, already expert in home-manufacture of explosives, could someday make atomic devices. This no longer requires immense power supplies or even a phenomenal scientific genius.

Where does such glum speculation lead? Certainly not to accord at Geneva to give urban guerrillas the rights of prisoners of war; nor to more marchers behind May Day's Red banner. Rather, as Maj. Gen. Edward Lansdale, an American expert on terrorists conjectures: "My hunch is that history is waiting to play a deadly joke on us."

McDonald's Declares First Cash Dividend as Net Rises 27%; Others Report

By CLARE M. RECKERT
The McDonald's Corporation, the nation's largest fast-food restaurant chain, achieved a 27 percent increase in first-quarter profits on a sales gain of 26 percent, Ray A. Kroc, chairman, reported yesterday.

The dividend is 2 1/2 cents quarterly, payable June 2 to holders of record May 18. Mr. Kroc said the company's financial position "enables us to pay a cash dividend while maintaining the ability to continue the company's growth."

First-quarter net income of $21.5 million, or 54 cents a share, set a record and compares with $16.9 million, or 42 cents a share, a year ago. Net sales of company-owned and licensed restaurants were $662.6 million, up from the former record of $524.1 million in the 1975 first quarter.

Revenues for the quarter were up 22 percent to a record $249.5 million and include net sales of company-owned restaurants, rental income, service fees, initial location and license fees, gains on sales of businesses and other income.

Operating earnings of the company's life, health and pension companies climbed 41 percent to $15.4 million and earnings of the casualty-property companies were $18.2 million, compared with $3.1 million a year ago. Underwriting losses in casualty-property lines were reduced to $23.6 million from $43.1 million in the first quarter last year, the company reported.

Earnings of affiliated diversified companies were up $2.2 million due primarily to the sale of a part interest in a real estate center by the Urban Investment and Development Company.

Revenues of the company rose 16 percent to $1.8 billion, including an increase in investment income of 16 percent to $241 million.

The first-quarter earnings improvement was attributed mainly to more profitable casualty-property and group health insurance operations.

WASHINGTON, April 30—Plastic pipe has been used to connect pipes in a way that is not only easier but also more secure.

Two patents relating to techniques for enciphering speech were received this week by the Bell Telephone Laboratories of Murray Hill, N. J., almost 31 years after the applications were filed.

The inventions, which concerned secret telephony and secret signaling, have never been used. They were to employ an earlier Bell invention, the Vocoder.

Called a "supercritical" or "upside down" wing, it is described as increasing speed without need of additional power, and as suitable for any aircraft flying near the speed of sound.

Mr. Whitcomb was presented last year by the Inventors and Contributions Board of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration with a $25,000 award for the invention.

The space agency will consider granting licenses under the patent. Patent applications covering the aircraft have been filed in a dozen foreign countries.

To The Investor Who Wants Powerful Leverage

With Complete Protection Against Margin Calls And Forced Liquidations. Now there's an investment that gives you the spectacular profit potential of commodity futures trading, but without its main drawback—the risk of margin calls and forced liquidations.

The investment is Commodity Options. They are just recently available to Americans, although they've been traded in England for over 100 years.

Commodity Options Give You Powerful Leverage. Depending on the type of commodity option you invest in, your leverage can run two, three, or even four to one.

You Can Virtually Unlimited Profit Potential. While commodity options carry less risk than commodity futures contracts, they also offer somewhat lower potential gain, since the first part of a price move must go to repay the premium.

Now there's a special booklet which describes commodity options in clear, non-technical terms, and tells how to use them. It's published by the International Trading Group Ltd., specialists in commodity options. It answers such questions as...

International Trading Group Ltd. 29201 Telegraph Road - Main Floor Southfield, Michigan 48076. Please send me your free booklet on commodity options. It will explain how this new investment method works, and describes the costs, advantages and risks. I understand there is absolutely no cost or obligation.

$1.5 BILLION DUE IN NEW OFFERINGS

Heavy Flurry of Financings Filed for Sale in May

By JOHN H. ALLAN

In an unusually heavy flurry of financing announcements yesterday, more than $1.5 billion of securities were filed with Government regulatory agencies in preparation for sale to investors in May.

Du Pont Plans Notes

Of the $1.5 billion of securities filed yesterday, the $400 million of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company notes and debentures was the largest. The financing, disclosed in broad terms earlier, will consist of $300 million of debentures due 2006 and $100 million of notes due 1986.

The Chas. Manhattan Bank filed $200 million of notes with the Comptroller of the Currency. The issue, to mature in 1986, will be offered by a group headed not only by Lehman Brothers and Lazard Freres and Company, the bank's traditional investment bankers, but by Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith as well.

Business Records

Two international issues were announced. Australia will sell $200 million of bonds here through another Morgan Stanley syndicate, and the American Development Bank will sell $100 million through a four-member Merrill Lynch network.

The other issues registered were the Seafirst Corporation's $50 million of bonds; the Indianapolis Power and Light Company's $25 million of bonds; the Creditfirst Financial Corporation's $25 million of notes; and the Arkansas Louisiana Gas Company's $25 million bond issue.

Takeover Adds to Troubles of Peru

subsidaries charge the mining operation a 4 percent sales commission and fines for slow loading at port.

President Francisco Morales Bermudez, who replaced General Velasco in a coup last August, called the Marcona expropriation a "precipitate action" but decided to uphold the takeover.

The takeover of the subsidiary of the Marcona Corporation, which is in turn owned by Utah International and the Cyprus Mines Corporation, could not have come at a worse time for Peru.

The country is in an economic crisis; its balance-of-payments deficit of more than $1.5 billion last year actually exceeded the total value of its exports.

Little new foreign investment is coming in because of the economic and political uncertainties. Foreign exchange reserves have fallen to less than $100 million and the Government has had difficulty obtaining loans abroad to finance the payments deficit.

According to Government and banking sources here, the United States Export-Import Bank stopped considering loan applications from Peru and the World Bank declined to give financial support to a copper mining project at Toromocho.

The Marcona dispute is believed to have adversely affected Cuzco, a large copper mine developed by a group of United States companies known as the Southern Peru Copper Corporation. Cuzco, a $120 million project, will be one of the largest copper mines in the world, but its management is still scrambling for more than $120 million in loans abroad.

Prices Hold Steady In Corn and Wheat; Potatoes Fluctuate

By ELIZABETH M. FOWLER

Corn and wheat prices held steady yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade in light trading.

Traders were reacting to two disparate influences. The exchange reported heavy tenders for delivery on the May contracts, which expire soon, and this exerted downward pressure on prices. At the same time, there were rumors that over the weekend there might be further announcements of the Soviet Union's buying of corn or wheat, and this tended to support prices.

May corn closed at $2.70 1/2 a bushel, little higher than on Thursday when it closed at $2.69 1/2. In the case of wheat, the May delivery ended at $2.39 1/2, hardly changed from Thursday's close of $2.38.

The sharp swings in May potato futures on the New York Mercantile Exchange continued yesterday.

Furthermore, when Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger visited Peru last February during his tour of Latin America, he reminded the Peruvians that United States legislation could trigger an economic blockade if an acceptable settlement was not reached.

The United States had previously blocked credits to Peru when the military Government expropriated with compensation an EXXON subsidiary in 1963. That credit blockade ended with the so-called Greene Agreement in 1974, under which the Peruvians paid $150 million in compensation to expropriated United States companies.

Besides all these economic pressures, the Peruvian Government has suffered substantial direct losses of $10 million a month because of a suspension of iron ore shipments since the Marcona takeover last July.

Even more serious was the fact that by taking over Marcona, the Peruvian Government automatically canceled sales contracts with buyers abroad.

The Peruvians have had difficulty recovering old customers and finding new ones, as a mounting stockpile of ore here indicates.

The Marcona operations normally produced 9.5 million tons a year, of which 70 percent was exported to Japan.

Carton Makers in No-Contest Pleas CHICAGO, April 30 (Reuters)—Twenty-two cardboard carton manufacturers, defendants in the biggest Federal antitrust suit in more than a decade, moved today to withdraw their not guilty pleas to charges of price fixing.

The 22 entered motions in United States District Court asking to be allowed to change their original pleas to a contest to charges contained in an antitrust indictment returned by a Federal grand jury in February.

Twenty-three corporations and 50 of their past or present executives were indicted. Forty-eight of the 50 individuals have also filed motions to change their pleas from not guilty to no contest. The Federal Government has one week to file petitions opposing the changes of pleas.

In a related development today, the Justice Department in Washington announced it had filed a civil suit against 21 of the corporations alleging the Government was overcharged for cartons it purchased.

U.N. Action Asked on Port Congestion

GENEVA, April 30—Emergency international task forces were urged today to help untangle the world's congested ports.

The cost of shipping jams is expected to be $5 billion this year because of the strains put on port handling and storage facilities, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development reported.

While no part of the world is free of the problem, the developing countries were said to be the hardest hit. The Persian Gulf is the region suffering most from the congestion of its ports, while the port of Lagos, Nigeria, has encountered the greatest difficulties, with delays of 200 days and more in ship turnarounds, the chairman of the UNCTAD session, Samuel Ogembo of Kenya, said at a news briefing.

Dollar Up in Most European Markets

BRUSSELS, April 30 (UPI)—The dollar made small gains on all European money markets except Milan today.

Dealers said intervention by the Swiss National Bank and possibly the Bank of France appeared to have a steadying influence on the dollar, which has declined most of the week.

The dollar was marked up in Frankfurt from 2.5330 marks to 2.5360, in Zurich from 2.5140 francs to 2.5148, in Paris from 4.6605 francs to 4.6615, and in Brussels from 39.77 francs to 39.775. Markets in the Netherlands were closed because of a national holiday. The dollar closed at 896.75 lire, compared with the previous day's 16-day high of 897.15.

In London, the pound opened firmer but slipped back marginally from yesterday's close of $1.84132 to end the week at $1.8407. The price of gold rose by 50 cents in Zurich to $128.35 and by 25 cents in London to $128.50.

U.S. Seeks End to Quinine Suit

WASHINGTON, April 30 (Reuters)—The Justice Department filed a proposed settlement today that would end a six-year-old antitrust suit against two West German companies that rank among the world's major producers of quinine and a derivative, quinidine. The proposed settlement was submitted to the United States District Court in New York City for approval.

It would terminate the suit brought in 1970 against Boehringer Mannheim G.m.b.H. and Vereinigte Chininfabrikri Zinner and Company, under the proposed judgment, the companies would pledge not to fix prices, establish quotas, engage in rigged bidding, or commit other acts that were cited in the suit as violations of United States antitrust laws.

'Politicizing' of Banks Is Alleged

Henry Kaufman, a general partner of Salomon Brothers, the international investment banking house, warned yesterday that the nation's banking system was "being politicized" and that "urgent steps should be taken to halt the process."

He told a New York conference sponsored by the Financial Times of London that "it is shocking to see the loans banks are forced to make to finance businesses and projects that are losing vast sums under the guise of governmental efforts to maintain employment."

Mr. Kaufman said that politicizing of banking was most likely to occur during periods of inflation, when the utilization of real resources was at a high level. He defined "politicizing" of banking as enforced credit allocation schemes and perhaps intervention in the lending and investing process through controls over bank management.

Alex Radin, a spokesman for municipal and rural electric power systems, said yesterday that a number of them in the southeast opposed the expected nomination of Thomas L. Longshore, an Alabama utility executive, to be a director of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Mr. Radin, executive director of the American Public Power Association, said he expected that President Ford would announce the appointment in Birmingham, Ala., on Monday.

It would be the President's second controversial nomination of a Republican businessman to a seat on the three-person board that has been vacant since June. The Senate Public Works Committee, by a vote of 11 to 1, rejected James F. Hooper Jr. of Mississippi, husband of a member of the Republican National Committee.

Reached by telephone in Birmingham at his Alabama Power Company office, Mr. Longshore said that if he was nominated he would support the committee and show that "there will be no conflict of interest legally...morally...ethically...as far as work goes and as well as ownership goes."

Mr. Longshore said he would discuss before the committee, and not before, charges such as Mr. Radin's that he would be legally disqualified if he takes with him from Alabama Power vested pension rights.

More broadly, Mr. Radin opposed the appointment on the ground that Mr. Longshore has been with the investor-owned utility 15 years and that Alabama Power "has a long history of conflicting relations with T.V.A., they fought T.V.A. from the very beginning."

Political and economic restraints in Italy are forcing the Montedison Company, one of Italy's largest manufacturing enterprises, with sales of $5 billion, to intensify its effort to develop foreign markets, Gioacchino Albanese, head of strategy and economic studies for the giant corporation, said yesterday at a New York news conference.

"The company, which employs more than 150,000 people and made capital expenditures of almost $1 billion in 1975," he said, "is subject to a lot of restraints both of a political and economic nature that restrict its ability to make a reasonable return and utilize its plants in spite of constant new investments."

"It seems easier for Montedison to develop efficiently its position in foreign markets through export of its products, its extensive knowledge in chemicals, plastics and pharmaceuticals as well as synthetic fibers and most recently through investment in expanding markets, such as the United States," he added.

Mr. Albanese pointed out that Montedison's sales abroad for the first quarter of 1976 amounted to about 30 percent of the total sales of the group. Montedison had set a goal to produce 15 percent of its total output abroad by 1980, compared with 7 percent at present.

BRITISH-AMERICAN WIDENS HOLDINGS

Deal Worth $110.4 Million Is Restructuring Move

LONDON, April 30 (Reuters) — The British-American Tobacco Company, the world's biggest tobacco concern, announced today it would merge with the Tobacco Securities Trust, an associated investment company, in a move that will tidy up a complicated cross-shareholding.

The deal means that British-American, valued on the London Stock Exchange at nearly $1.34 billion, will absorb Tobacco Securities and get either complete or larger ownership of a string of foreign tobacco companies.

Technically, the merger is a reverse takeover of British-American by Tobacco Securities, which is valued at about $110.4 million. Tobacco Securities will become the holding company for the British-American Group and will be renamed BAT Industries.

The deal provides British-American with a cheap way of restructuring itself on a holding company basis and also provides a way of disentangling the shareholding links in Tobacco Securities between British-American and the Imperial Group, Britain's other major tobacco company.

Imperial, which has a 22 percent stake in British-American's 23 percent, is to sell this holding for more than $25.76 million to the merger company.

G.E. Sells Its Holding in Telefunken of Germany. The AEG Telefunken General Electric Company announced in West Berlin yesterday that General Electric's 10 percent holding in AEG Telefunken, valued at about $59.25 million, had been purchased by the Dresdner Bank of West Germany.

The Dresdner Bank said that the AEG Telefunken shares had been placed largely with long-term institutional investors.

U.S. Opposing Newhouse On Broadcast Acquisition

The Justice Department announced in Washington yesterday that it opposed the acquisition by the Newhouse Broadcasting Company of remaining outstanding shares of the Mount Hood Radio and Television Broadcasting Corporation of Portland, Ore. Newhouse already owns 50 percent of Mount Hood, which operates two radio stations and a television station in Portland as well as the city's only daily newspaper, The Oregonian.

Completion of the merger of I.T. Imperial Corporation into Goid Inc. was announced yesterday.

dampen food price increases so far this year.

When livestock feed is relatively high priced, as it has been in recent years, farmers tend to hold down production. Retail food prices generally held steady or declined slightly during the first quarter of this year, according to the Government. The department says that consumers can expect some increases this spring but that they will probably be relatively small. The increase in meat animal prices reported today will probably be reflected in prices in the next few months.

The department's report said that farm prices of meat animals as a group jumped 8 percent during the month.

Chinatown Planning Community Bank

help them. Some are afraid of the banks and keep their money under the carpet."

For example, Mr. Chuang continued, Chinatown does not have a supermarket, although most citizens want one, because the capital of at least $100,000 is lacking. The new bank would not be itself able to finance such an undertaking, he said, but it could be the medium for organizing financing with other banks.

Aid for Community Centers

Mr. Hsiung said that the bank could help finance community centers needed for older citizens of Chinatown. Along with all the usual banking services, he noted, it would add an "intimate" service to people on social security problems, managing of budgets and other devices. "We would give more patience to help people," Mr. Chuang commented.

The bank also plans to have mobile trucks bring banking services to parts of Chinatown, which has a population of about 60,000 persons of Chinese origin. In addition, Mr. Hsiung said, similar services might be extended to other areas of the city where Chinese-Americans reside, such as Morningside Heights and parts of Queens.

Along with branches in other parts of the country, Golden-Pacific National has plans for opening branches in Hong Kong, Manila, Singapore and other parts of Southeast Asia to attract deposits from the 50 million "overseas Chinese" residing there.

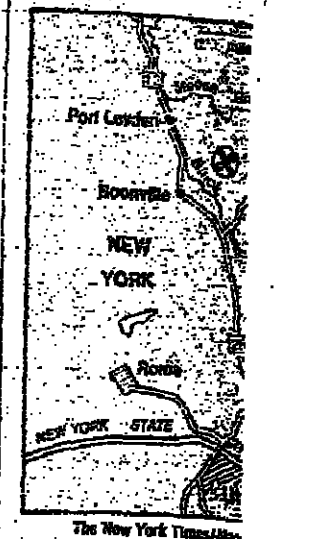

Mr. Chuang, who is 35 years old, is a native of Taiwan. He came to this country in 1967 after graduating from the University of Taiwan. He took a master's degree in law at the University of California at Berkeley and a doctorate in law at George Washington University. Before setting up his own practice, he held legal posts in business concerns and worked also with the Wall Street law firm of Cadwalader, Wicker & Taft.

4 Years in Planning

He began planning the new bank about four years ago and conceived the name, "Golden-Pacific" while watching sunsets in Berkeley. The golden vista over the Pacific, he said, made him think of it as a link between America and Asia.

The first organizational meeting of the bank will be held Thursday to elect directors. In addition, to Mr. Chuang and Mr. Hsiung, other prospective directors include C. T. Wu, professor of geography at Hunter College; Hsiung Chow, president of the Hing Chow Trading Company; David Chen, president of United Sea Transport; James Wine, a Washington, D. C., lawyer and former United States Ambassador to Luxembourg; Lin Chen, head of the Summit Corporation, a diversified company; and Joseph Chu, a real estate operator.

Titanium Ores Feared On Adirondack

Special to The New York Times. ALBANY, April 30 — Uranium ore have been discovered in upstate New York western edge of the Adirondack Mountains, according to the United States Geological Survey.

Titanium, a rare metal used to build structures in airplanes. In its form, it is used in pacemakers, welding rods and alloys. Domestic supplies last year were more than 1.1 million tons. Deposits of titanium ores have been found in a 30-square-mile area at Lewis and Oneida Co. just east of the Black and south of the Moose River.

"The sands could be mined profitably using conventional technology, Eric Force of the Geological Survey. "Their volume is so large that geological adaptations warranted eventually Force estimated that there was a total of 2.4 billion tons of sand containing 31 tons of titanium.

The United States intensive deposits of titanium, the Geological Survey said. Because of economic factors, however, this country imports nearly 60 percent of its needs, mainly from Australia and Canada.

Stock prices weakened yesterday on the American Exchange and in the counter market.

Although the American value index managed a small gain of 0.67, declines outscored gains by 327 to 277. The price average share remains unchanged.

Trading in Amex issues, including transactions on exchanges and the market, fell to 1.99 million shares on Thursday.

In the counter market, NASDAQ industrial index rose 0.20 to 97.33 while the composite index lost 0.47 to 100.00. A total of 410 issues of stock were traded. Turnover rose to 6.05 million shares from 5.93 million shares before.

part of dictating contract terms. "We don't want this board to become a labor relations board," he declared.

At the private Control Board meeting, a letter was presented to the T.W.U. counsel, John F. O'Donnell, arguing successfully as it turned out, that the board should not act until the union presented its view of the legality of the wage raise.

In his letter, Mr. O'Donnell contended that the Attorney General's opinion was based on "an inaccurate statement of facts" concerning the agreement. Mr. O'Donnell noted that the Control Board's initial concern, as stated April 19 by the Governor, emphasized that the agreement did not contain a wage deferral provision.

The emergency state wage freeze did permit limited raises in cases where workers operated with the city by deferring some salary increase. The agreement, Mr. O'Donnell contended, does contain deferral provisions and so fits within the wage freeze.

Mr. Carey noted at his news conference that other unions had agreed to deferrals, but he seemed to stress more the need to make a cost-of-living increase dependent on achieving improved productivity. He also noted in passing that the Control Board had broad power under the law to suspend the wage freeze at a time it considered proper.

Clearly, the Governor was suggesting the direction that a proper contract might take. But he continued to maintain that Stainless Steel Quotas Exceeded. BRUSSELS, April 30 (Reuters) — The United States will inevitably impose quotas on imports of stainless steel products from the nine Communist countries, Clayton Yeutter, United States deputy trade negotiator, said today.

The American steel industry has complained that imports from the Common Market and Japan and Sweden have severely damaged domestic output and caused widespread unemployment.

Japan and Sweden are currently negotiating agreements to market these products in the United States in an orderly fashion, but both European Economic Community and American officials said there was no chance of such an agreement for the E.E.C.

Mr. Yeutter said the only question remaining is whether both sides can agree on a ceiling for Common Market exports during the next three years. If not, he added, the United States will impose unilateral quotas.

E.E.C. Warns U.S. on Cars

BRUSSELS, April 30 (Reuters) — The European Economic Community warned today that proposed United States trade sanctions on imported cars would have a catastrophic effect on European industry and mean inevitable reprisals.

A Common Market spokesman said the warning was given by its foreign affairs commissioner, Sir Christopher Soames, in talks with United States Government delegation headed by Arthur A. Hartman, Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs.

The United States Treasury has scheduled a decision on May 10 over complaints from the United Auto Workers union that cars imported from Europe, Japan and Canada have been "dumped" — sold at a low cent to 3.2 million, a figure 17 percent lower than that had been forecast.

Slump Grips Mexico's Tourist Industry

With more and more Mexicans having turned to tourism as a source of income, the slump means unemployment for thousands of waiters, maids and bellboys. And it means hardship for many self-employed street vendors and artisans who, like Mr. Sanchez, have found their earnings halved.

For the Government, the 4.8 percent drop in tourist earnings to $560 million in 1975 has brought new pressure on the country's balance of payments, which last year had a current-account deficit of $3.6 billion, a record.

With 85 percent of visitors to Mexico coming from the United States, the tourist industry is confident that an American economic expansion this year will bring a rise in the number and spending of tourists in Mexico.

But many obstacles to a rapid recovery of the industry remain. Not least is the fact that three years of high inflation have wiped out Mexico's attraction as an inexpensive vacation spot. Its hotel and restaurant prices are now only slightly lower than in peninsula and at Ixtapa on the Pacific coast—were given to a new body called FONATUR rather than to the Ministry of Tourism.

Part of the official confusion about the tourist industry reflects the ambivalence that Mexicans have always felt toward a sector that provides vital foreign exchange and lots of jobs but also seriously erodes the country's cultural values.

As the number of United States tourists visiting Mexico has grown over the last 15 years, American styles in clothes, food and even language have gradually infiltrated Mexican society. Sometimes middle-class Mexicans can be seen crowding restaurants that serve hamburgers and pancakes.

"The Government really hoped that eventually Mexico could do without tourism," one official said. "But the fact is that it needs tourism more than ever, and we'll just have to come to terms with this reality. We simply can't afford false pride."

Bank of Montreal, the Bank of Nova Scotia, the Toronto Dominion, Canadian National, the Provincial Bank of Canada, the Mercantile Bank of Canada, the Bank of British Columbia and the Unity Bank of Canada. Details of how the banks will share in the loan were unavailable.

The banks are bound to advance Lockheed on loan, the difference between the actual cost to the aircraft company and the allocation to the project by Canada of $30 million for the first year, $110 million the second year and $170 million the third year, after which Canada will pay the full cost of the aircraft on taking delivery.

Canada will pay the interest charged by Lockheed on the loan. The rate was not disclosed.

Uncertainties concerning financing had caused two postponements of the signing since the contract was agreed to in principle by the company and the Canadian Department of National Defense last November. The second postponement was to have expired at midnight tonight.

Signing on behalf of Canada was Jean-Pierre Goyette, the Minister of Supply and Services whose department is responsible for the funding of the purchase, and Robert W. Haack, the Lockheed chairman.

part of dictating contract terms. "We don't want this board to become a labor relations board," he declared.

At the private Control Board meeting, a letter was presented to the T.W.U. counsel, John F. O'Donnell, arguing successfully as it turned out, that the board should not act until the union presented its view of the legality of the wage raise.

In his letter, Mr. O'Donnell contended that the Attorney General's opinion was based on "an inaccurate statement of facts" concerning the agreement. Mr. O'Donnell noted that the Control Board's initial concern, as stated April 19 by the Governor, emphasized that the agreement did not contain a wage deferral provision.

The emergency state wage freeze did permit limited raises in cases where workers operated with the city by deferring some salary increase. The agreement, Mr. O'Donnell contended, does contain deferral provisions and so fits within the wage freeze.

Mr. Carey noted at his news conference that other unions had agreed to deferrals, but he seemed to stress more the need to make a cost-of-living increase dependent on achieving improved productivity. He also noted in passing that the Control Board had broad power under the law to suspend the wage freeze at a time it considered proper.

Clearly, the Governor was suggesting the direction that a proper contract might take. But he continued to maintain that

Pilot Cites Engine Problem in Virgin Islands Crash

By RALPH BLUMENTHAL
Special to The New York Times
CHARLOTTE, AMALIE, V.I., April 30—The pilot of the American Airlines Boeing 727 jet that crashed here Tuesday noticed a lack of reverse engine thrust when he tried to slow the plane after landing far along on the unusually short airport runway, according to investigators of the National Transportation Safety Board. Thirty-seven of the 88 persons aboard died in the crash.

The pilot, Capt. Arthur Bujnowski, who was interviewed today by investigators for the first time since the crash, acknowledged earlier reports that he had landed about 3,000 feet down the 4,650-foot runway on St. Thomas and tried briefly to take off again before failing and sharply braking, investigators said. The plane plunged through two airport fences and over an embankment and a road before coming to rest in flames against two buildings. Meanwhile, the last missing body, that of an infant was recovered from the wreckage today.

Mr. Dreifus said the pilot had reported that the plane was "floating" before touchdown for a reason that still has not been established. The touchdown occurred about 2,000 feet beyond the white runway markings pilots are supposed to aim for when landing. Still, under ordinary circumstances, the plane could have landed in 1,200 feet, and there was more than that amount of space when it touched down.

"He knew he was long," Mr. Dreifus said. "That's why he decided to go around."

What happened next is not clear, the investigator added. However, he said that two possible causes had been ruled out: the air traffic controllers and the instrument landing system on the runway.

The nose wheel brake was also functioning normally, Mr. Dreifus said.

He said the pilot was in good mental and physical condition and "very helpful" to investigators. Earlier an American Airlines official had described the pilot as being "very broken up" after the crash and under doctor's care.

The pilot and the flight engineer and first officer, all of whom suffered minor injuries, were released today to return home pending further interviews.

The last large fuselage and tail sections were cleared away today from their resting place against a gasoline station and pharmaceutical warehouse. In the wreckage workers found the body of an infant, identified by investigators as the child of Cheryl Scott, who also was killed. No further information was available and American Airlines said the coroner has asked that the identity be withheld pending further examination of the body.

Safety board officials said that despite widespread reports of another fatality on the ground they had found no evidence that anyone outside was killed by the plane.

Even before news of the pilots' interview was distributed, the reports of several witnesses centered on the engine trouble as a possible cause of the crash.

According to one account, said to corroborate statements by some flight controllers in the rear jet engines and heard the airports tower, a witness two noises that sounded like to the crash said was on the explosions. After that there road at the far end of the run—was apparently no more re- way watching the flight come ess engine thrust, the investi- in. He told investigators he saw gators were told. As the runway plane shot terminal building, perhaps 2-, by, the eyewitness told investi- 000 feet past the white marks, gators, it missed him by a mat- ter of feet—so close he said vestigators, he saw two puffs he could see the crew in the of white smoke coming from cockpit flicking switches.

2% Rise in Most Domestic Air Fares Is Approved

WASHINGTON, April 30 (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board agreed today to let airlines raise their domestic fares by 2 percent and some North Atlantic fares to Europe up to 10 percent.

The board also approved fares proposed by Air France and British Airways for flights between the United States and Europe on the supersonic Concorde passenger jet.

Airlines which said they would introduce the fare increases tomorrow are American, Braniff, Continental, TWA, United, Allegheny, Frontier, Hughes Air West, Ozark and Texas International. Northwest, North Central and Piedmont plan to raise their fares by 2 percent on May 7, an American Airlines spokesman said.

Delta, Eastern, National and Southern will increase their fares May 15. Air New England was the only airline which did not request the increase.

The North Atlantic fare hike, effective tomorrow and extending through Oct. 31, applies to first class and promotional fares. The board rejected an increase in normal economy-class fares.

The advance purchase excursion fares, which requires passengers to make reservations and pay for their tickets well in advance, was approved by the CAB.

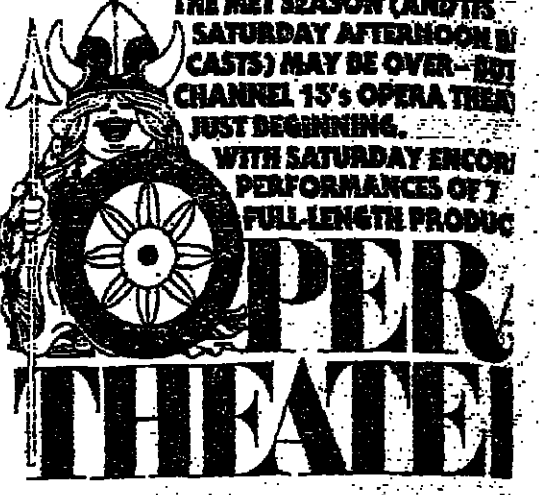

The fares approved by the board for the Concorde supersonic flights call for a charge of first class plus 20 percent in the New York-Paris and New York-London markets.

The domestic pay hike means, for example, that passengers flying roundtrip between Washington and Los Angeles will pay $188 for a coach seat instead of $184.

A Footnote on Bob Haldeman

By TOM BUCKLEY

The name of H.R. Haldeman figured in an unexpected way in a recent letter from Otto W. Schafenberg of East 73d Street.

He was commenting on a letter published in this column a couple of weeks ago from a J. Walter Thompson advertising man who commended several Penn Central New Haven employees for helping him to recover important business documents he had left on his homeward-bound train.

"It reminded me of a similar incident which happened to a J.W.T. employee whom I worked along side of some 30 years ago," he wrote. "This young man had borrowed some important research material to study at home. When he got to the office the next morning he realized he had left it aboard his train. He returned to Grand Central Station, but was unable to find it.

"He was very dismayed, fearing he would lose his job and conjecturing that the material might prove valuable to the competition. He even placed a lost-and-found advertisement in The Times. The material was never recovered, but he did not lose his job. In fact, he moved upward and upward in the company, eventually met Richard Nixon, worked on his election campaigns and wound up in the White House. The rest we know too well, for the young man was Bob Haldeman.

"I have often wondered since then what might have happened if he had lost his job as he feared. Who knows? I did lose mine a few months after that and never worked in the advertising business again."

Mr. Schafenberg was generous in supplying additional information to fill out this footnote to history.

"I got a job in the mail room at J. Walter Thompson in 1946 after serving 44 months in the navy," he said. "By 1948 I was working on a consumer panel. It was made up of a couple of thousand families around the country that were used to test new products and ad campaigns and things like that.

"Bob Haldeman was hired in the summer of 1948. He was just out of U.S.C. He looked just the same as he did when he was in the news. Crew cut, grim looking. He wasn't very humorous even then.

"Anyhow, we were talking up data from the consumer panel, about the new Ford line. I think Thompson still has the account. Anyhow, Haldeman wanted to study it at home, and on his way back to the office he lost it."

"Mr. Schafenberg went on: 'I remember something else. He had a trailer, and he and his wife used to spend their weekends driving through New England, buying antiquities. During his vacation they would drive out to California with them. He told me once he could sell them there at a good profit. One thing more—he wouldn't get into the Thompson insurance plan. He said he was a Christian Scientist and didn't believe in it.'

It was Mr. Schafenberg who, later that year, was told that he didn't have a future in advertising. He got an office job with the Texas Company and remained there until his retirement last year. He lives quietly now with his twin brother, Albert, a bank employee. Both are bachelors.

On the dashboard of Solomon Adler's taxicab there is a hand-lettered card that reads: "One of life's greatest mysteries is how the best who wasn't good enough to marry your daughter can be the father of the smartest grandchild in the world." Others say: "I never get lost. Everyone tells me where to go" and "Of all my relations I like sex best."

At the end of a string attached to the meter hangs the rubber figure of a jester. Every time Mr. Adler's cab hits a pothole, which it does maybe a thousand times a day, the jester dances up and down.

In other words, a ride with Solomon Adler is like a month in the Catskills, or a rolling anthology of Sam Levenson apothegms and

Communist Youth Group

Is Established in Poland

WARSAW, April 30 (Reuters)—Poland has merged groups in the army, in rural communities and in work places to form a 2,000,000-strong centralized youth organization better adapted to implement Communist programs.

The merger took place officially during a congress of Polish youth on Wednesday. Two youth groups—the Polish Pathfinders (Boy Scouts) and the student union—will remain outside the new organization.

POLICE SEIZE MAN ON PISTOL CHARGE

Troopers Say the Suspect Belongs to LeGrand 'Family'

By MAX H. SEIGEL

The state police in Sullivan County said they had arrested Darryl Stewart, a member of the "family" of Deveron LeGrand, a self-styled Brooklyn Bishop, after finding a .38-caliber pistol and ammunition in his possession.

Mr. Stewart, 21 years old, had entered the Fernside police barracks around noon on Thursday to discuss a private matter. The police said that as a result of their conversation with him, they had searched a valise he was carrying and found the weapon. Mr. Stewart was charged with criminal possession of a weapon. The state police would not say what exactly prompted them to search the valise.

The young man's wife Gladys, 18, and her sister, Yvonne Rivera, 16, were said by District Attorney Eugene Gold of Brooklyn to have been murdered and then taken to the upstate area where their bodies were allegedly burned and then dumped into Briscoe Pond.

One state trooper, who asked that his name not be used, said that he expected that Mr. Stewart would shed new light on the murder of his wife and her sister.

But District Attorney Gold would not confirm this yesterday. "It's too early to say anything," he said. "It's possible. We're not yet sure, but we'll know very soon."

The District Attorney disclosed, meanwhile, that divers sent to comb the pond for bodies of other missing persons who had been associated with the church Mr. LeGrand operated at 222 Brooklyn Avenue, in the Crown Heights section, had brought up "a great deal of stuff." He said that mostly their vacuum equipment had picked up bones, but that other objects also had been sucked up from the bottom of the pond, only a few miles from a summer camp maintained by Mr. LeGrand for members of his church.

Mr. Stewart, who is believed by members of the District Attorney's staff to be one of the many sons of Mr. LeGrand, was taken to Sullivan County Jail in Tiontonville after a hearing before the Town of Estel Justice Stanley Leise.

He is being held for arraignment Tuesday before the Liberty Town Justice, Jack Levine.

Hochberg Seeks Dismissal of Election-Law Bribery Indict

By RONALD SMOTHERS

ALBANY, April 30—Counsel for Assemblyman Alan Hochberg today sought a dismissal of the Bronx Democrat's indictment on a bribery charge by contending that this alleged violation of election laws was not within the jurisdiction of the special state prosecutor who indicted him.

In arguments before Justice William Crangle in State Supreme Court, J. Jeffrey Weisenfeld, Mr. Hochberg's lawyer, asked the court to further hearings so that he could prove his contention that the special State Prosecutor for Nursing, Albert H. Blumenbach, had charged perjury himself before hearings of a legislative committee investigating nursing homes.

Justice Crangle reserved decision on the motion for dismissal and additional hearings.

Weisenfeld said in court papers, "that he [Mr. Hynes] wished to use any evidence of illegality as leverage to force Mr. Hochberg to wear a recording device into the halls of the Legislature to gather nursing information. This is no more justified than investigating a homicide or rape to use as leverage."

Another Case Cited

Mr. Weisenfeld further cited the April 13 decision in Manhattan by State Supreme Court Justice Aloysius J. Mele in dismissing Mr. Hynes' indictment of the Assembly majority leader, Albert H. Blumenbach, on charges of perjury himself before hearings of a legislative committee investigating nursing homes.

That decision said Mr. Hynes had no jurisdiction to "investigate or prosecute" cases of perjury before legislative committees. He would investigate and prosecute cases, however, involving perjury before grand juries investigating nursing homes.

However, Robert H. Schwartz, first assistant to Mr. Hynes, argued that the special prosecutor was not barred from investigating nursing-home crimes, but could not prosecute such cases without permission of the Governor. That permission was obtained on Feb. 13, two weeks after the events leading to the indictment.

Mr. Schwartz likened the defense argument to the "absurd" situation in which a policeman, temporarily off his beat, would not be allowed to intervene in a mugging he observed.

"It seems to be saving the prosecutor of my choice didn't catch me," said Mr. Schwartz. The indictment stems from a Jan. 30 conversation between

Mr. Hochberg and Charles Rosen, the leader of the rent strike in Co-op City in the Bronx. In the conversation Mr. Hochberg is accused of offering Mr. Rosen a $20,000 a year job and a "show-in-law" for Mr. Rosen's brother-in-law if the rent strike leader did not carry out a threat to run against him in the upcoming Democratic primary. Mr. Rosen secretly recorded this conversation with equipment provided by Mr. Hynes' office which had previously learned of the offer.

The arguments in court today reveal other aspects of the case. Mr. Schwartz told the special prosecutor had since July 1957 been investigating Mr. Hochberg in connection with receiving campaign contributions from nursing-home operators who had pleaded guilty to fraud in obtaining Medicaid funds. Mr. Rosen first came to them, Mr.

Schwartz said, who to help in this investigation was in the company of Mr. Rosen in the company of the alleged bribe office.

Mr. Hochberg, confronted with the Feb. 10, at first he refused to be interviewed and gather information. "I'll give you some nursing info but I won't give it in my house," Mr. Schwartz quoted him as saying. "Every prosecutor salt invites a politician to wear a rock in an attempt to fish," he said on the special prosecutor's behalf. Mr. Hochberg's co-
